B.C. Hospital Technicians Taking Vote

Strike votes by 2,500 members of the Health Sciences Association at hospitals in Victoria and across B.C. will start later today, the first such votes in the union's five-year history.

Jack Campbell, executive director of the HSA which represents laboratory and x-ray technicians, hospital pharmacists, physiotherapists, dietitians and medical records librarians, said today the results of the vote in 81 B.C. hospitals should be compiled by late next week.

There are 140 HSA members in the Royal Jubilee Hospital and 83 HSA members in Victoria General Hospital.

The union removed a no-strike clause in its constitution at a convention in May because the union has been "pushed around so much" in negotiations with the B.C. Health Association, formerly the B.C. Hospitals' Association, Campbell said.

Negotiations for a new contract started in early December and broke off this week after an offer from the B.C. Health Association which would have given some HSA members $39-a-month pay cuts, Campbell said.

Provincial mediator Ed Sims has withdrawn from the negotiations and is now preparing his report for Labor Minister Bill King. No strike action is possible until the report has been handed in, possibly next week.

Campbell has been instructed by the HSA executive to arrange meetings with other hospital unions in the event that a strike is called.

He said a decision on whether to ask the other unions to honor picket lines set up will be made only after discussions with the other unions — the Hospital Employees' Association, the Registered Nurses' Association of B.C. and the International Union of Operating Engineers.

In the event of a strike, the HSA will maintain emergency services, Campbell said.

He said the union is putting together an HSA emergency committee at each hospital and the committee will act as a contact between the hospital and the union. In the event of an emergency during a strike, the committee would make sure that necessary HSA services would be provided.

Most of the HSA members are either radiology or laboratory technicians and the union is seeking parity for those members with the registered nurses.

Campbell said technicians require one year more training than registered nurses but are paid about $200 a month less than the nurses.

B.C. Health Association spokesman Joseph Roberts said the $39 a month pay cuts arose from the reclassification of some employees.

"Many of the employees would jump a classification grade (upwards)," Roberts said.

He said the hospitals' proposals are "just as realistic as (the union) proposals which would have seen technicians paid considerably more than registered nurses."

NUCLEAR TEST SHAKES VEGAS

MERCURY, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear device with a force at least 10 times greater than the atomic blast that levelled Hiroshima in the Second World War was detonated below the Nevada desert shortly after dawn today, creating a tremor felt in Las Vegas, 95 miles away.

There were no immediate reports of any damage from the tremor.

Forest Firms Pinched, Seek Union Restraint

Senior executives of B.C.'s forest companies today warned that the industry which represents about 50 per cent of the provinical economy, is in danger of becoming unprofitable and withering away.

The executives, members of Forest Industrial Relations and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, bargaining agents for the forest companies, said rising costs, particularly labor costs, are making the industry non-competitive in the world markets.

As the executives were making what they called a "sobering economic message to the people of B.C." a spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America, now in the midst of contract negotiations with FIR, said a strike vote by the 32,000 coastal woodworkers should be completed by the end of next week.

The next meeting between the union, which has been without a collective agreement since midnight Saturday, and the forest companies is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

"Traditionally the strike vote was taken prior to the expiry of the contract, but this year the bargaining committee decided to wait a little longer," the spokesman said.

Results of the strike vote will be released June 27.

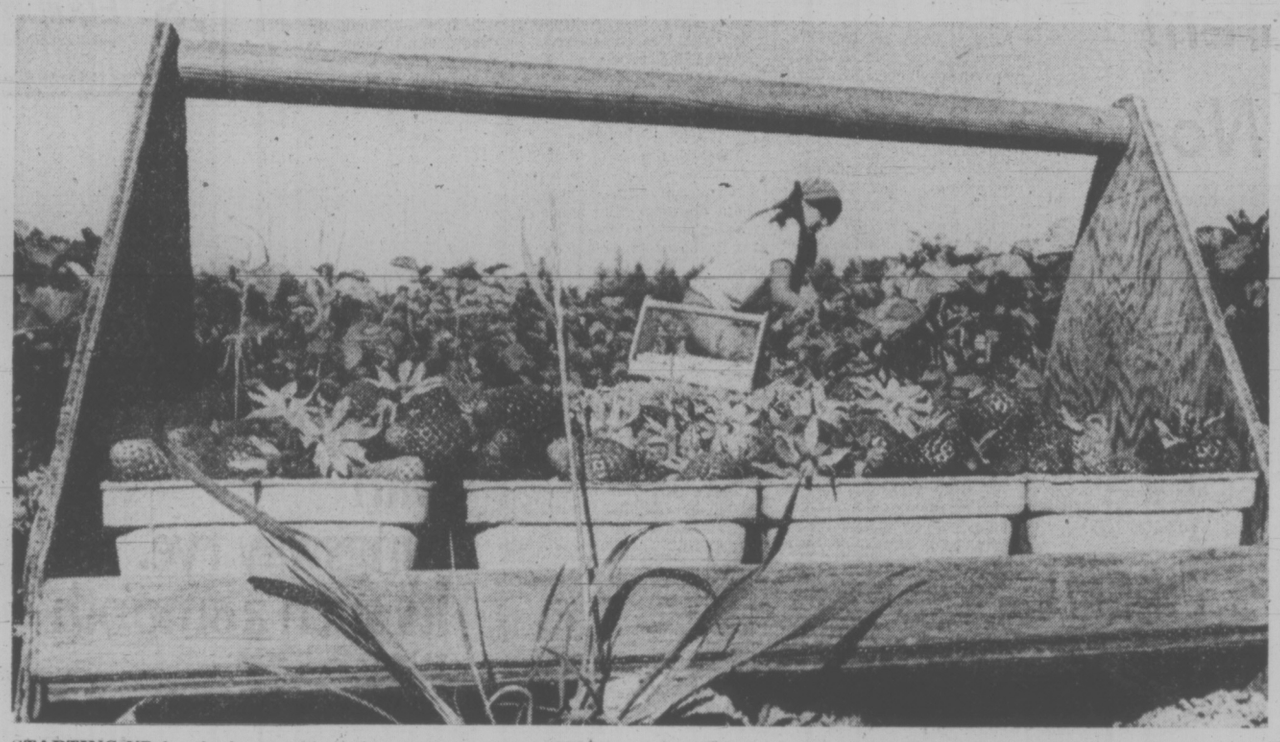
The union is asking for an across the board increase of $1 an hour plus a 24 cents an hour cost of living adjustment, improved health and welfare benefits and a dental plan in the one year contract.

FIR chairman Peter Bentley, president of Canadian Forest Products, said today the IWA demands amount to more than a $4 an hour increase, "not $1 as the IWA has publicized."

"We have reached the point in the industry's struggle for survival that having been caught between the demands of all levels of government and labor, we have been squeezed to the point where we must reverse the trend if in the mutual interest of all concerned, there is to be a viable future," Bentley said.

George Flater, vice-president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, involved in negotiations with the Canadian Paperworkers Union and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, said if B.C. producers have to absorb higher costs the profit margin will make it unattractive for companies to expand.

"If we are not competitive in price and manufacturing costs, we won't be able to provide new jobs and work opportunities and we could eventually have less jobs," Flater said.



STARTING UP for the home table is this year's strawberry season on the Saanich Peninsula. Season is expected to last three weeks and will be followed by raspberry and loganberry crops. The Canada Farm Labor Office of Canada Manpower has 250 persons registered looking for berry picking work and is expecting growers to call soon for workers.

EPP STILL PAID

Deputy attorney general for corrections E. W. Epp was ordered to take a leave of absence because "the government lost confidence in his ability to manage the (corrections) branch," a government spokesman said today.

Deputy Attorney General Dave Vickers said the decision to relieve Epp of his duties was based entirely on a question of management, especially in the area of budget and staff deployment.

Those reasons should have been "very clear" to Epp, said Vickers.

The corrections director, who was ordered to take the three month leave of absence Monday by Attorney-general Alex Macdonald said Wednesday he was not given any reason for the order and "was completely in the dark."

Epp is being paid during the leave of absence and according to the order will return to work for the government in some other capacity at the end of three months.

Vickers said any further comment on Epp's departure would have to come from Macdonald, who is in England this week.

Arabs 'Building Arsenal'

Times News Services

Israeli Defence Minister Shimon Peres said today that despite a trend for peace in the Middle East Arab nations are building up a war arsenal more powerful than that of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

And in Minneapolis Wednesday, President Ford warned of a "drift" toward war in the region.

Ford said any new fighting in the Middle East would be more dangerous than past conflicts and would include a paralyzing oil embargo.

The president's emphasis on the "drift" in the Mideast came as somewhat of a surprise after his discussions with Egyptian presidnet Anwar Sadat June 1-2 in Salzburg, and his discussions last week in Washington with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

"It is a potentially very volatile situation that could erupt into a real tough conflit any time, and the longer we drift with no prospect of action, the more potential the igniting becomes," Ford said.

"We are working with the whole Arab complex because another war out there would be worse than the Yom Kippur war of 1973. It would be

Fire Spectacular

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A friction spark from a jammed potash conveyor belt Wednesday touched off a spectacular fire at Vancouver Wharves Ltd., on the North Shore just east of the Lions Gate Brigde. Firemen from three departments brought the fire under control in about an hour. No one was injured.

Earl Named Killer

LONDON (AP) — A coroner's jury named Lord Lucan, a missing British earl, as the killer of his children's nursemaid. The verdict was returned at Westminster's coroner's court in a dramatic climax to a four-day inquiry into the death of Sandra Rivett, 29, found beaten to death in the Belgravia home of Lord Lucan's wife.

Indochina Aid $16M

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada is increasing aid to South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia by $10 million to $16.75 million, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Wednesday. "The International Red Cross will receive a cash contribution of $1 million to support its current field operations, he said. United cash grants of $4 million and food aid valued at $5 million will be channeled through UN agencies involved in relief and rehabilitation programs in Indochina.

Nurses Offered 38%

HALIFAX (CP) — Nurses from 12 Nova Scotia hospitals will vote today on what Health Minister William MacEachen has termed the largest settlement offer ever made by the Nova Scotia government — a 38.1 per cent raise. The Staff Nurses' Association of Nova Scotia has recommended against the offer.

Cost-of-Living Boost Highest in Vancouver

OTTAWA (CP) — Cost-of-living increases in May hit residents of Vancouver and Saint John, N.B., the hardest, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Smallest increase in major cities across the country were recorded in Halifax and St. John's, Nfld.

Separate figures are not calculated for Victoria but factors here are considered to be the same as for Vancouver with many prices being somewhat higher.

The price indexes do not measure where goods and services are cheapest, only how fast prices rise or decline on average within the cities.

The government agency reported last week that the general consumer price index across the country rose eight-tenths of one per cent in May.

In Halifax and St. John's the May increase was one half of one per cent.

In Vancouver and Saint John it was 1.1 per cent.

Among the 14 cities, Halifax and Ottawa had the best price performance over May, 1974, with increases of 8.9 per cent.

The largest 12-month increase was in Winnipeg, where the index rose 11.2 per cent.

Food prices rose in all centres in May, although the price of most meats was down in St. John's. Beef and poultry prices dropped in Halifax and the cost of eggs, dairy products and bakery and cereal products declined in Edmonton.

The smallest food price increase for May was in Edmonton, where the food index rose three-tenths of one per cent. Regina had the smallest food price increase for the 12-month period with a 7.6-per-cent rise.

Saint John recorded the highest food price increases for both May and the 12 months. Food costs there jumped 1.8 per cent in May and were up 13.5 per cent for the 12-month period.

The rise in shelter costs in May was the smallest in St. John's, up three-tenths of one per cent.

The largest increase was in Vancouver, where shelter costs were up 1.1 per cent.

Halifax was best in shelter costs over the 12 months, with an increase of 5.8 per cent. The largest 12-month increase was a 12.2-per-cent rise in Winnipeg.

Clothing prices dropped in three cities in May — declining two-tenths of one per cent in Winnipeg and one-tenth of one per cent in both Toronto and Montreal.

The largest increases in clothing prices occurred in Ottawa, Saint John and Thunder Bay, Ont., where prices rose four-tenths of one per cent in May.

At the same time, Thunder Bay had the smallest increase in clothing prices over 12 months, with a rise of 3.9 per cent. The largest increase in clothing prices over the 12-month period was in St. John's, up 8.3 per cent.

Leftists Pelt Catholics

LISBON (CP) — Troops today evacuated about 600 Catholics, most of them women, trapped all night in the palace of the Archbishop of Lisbon by angry left-wing extremists.

The Catholics, some of them injured in a clash with the leftists outside the palace Wednesday night were driven off in open army trucks.

The Catholics had tried to stage a counter-demonstration against a left-wing rally in support of workers who had occupied a Catholic radio station. The occupation has threatened a church-state split.

The Catholics took refuge in the palace, headquarters of the Portuguese Catholic Church. The leftists, at times numbering over 5,000, threw stones, iron bars and sticks, and shouted "Death to Fascism."

Soldiers guarding the palace said after today's evacuation that only a handful of Catholics were injured, none of them seriously.

As they were driven off in open army trucks, the surging crowd of leftists pelted them with rubbish and shouted insults.

There were nuns and a number of children among the evacuees.

Weekly Paycheque Averages $197.07

OTTAWA (CP) — The average industrial wage rose one per cent during April to $197.07 a week, 14.6 per cent higher than a year ago, Statistics Canada said Wednesday in a preliminary report.

The consumer price index rose by one-half of a percentage point in April, 11.1 per cent above a year earlier.

The industrial wage average covers about 4.5 million workers but does not include those in agriculture, government service, fishing and the military.

Statistics Canada says there were weekly gains in earnings in all the major regions and for all industry divisions except forestry.

Greeks Name Head

ATHENS (AP) — The Greek parliament elected Constantine Tsatsos president of Greece today for a five-year term. Tsatsos, 76, a close associate of Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis, got 210 of the 295 baloots cast, 13 more than the two-thirds required for election. He will be sworn in Friday.

New BCPC Plan Cuts Bunker Fuel

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Lechner, general manager of the Crown-owned British Columbia Petroleum Corporation, said Wednesday the corporation has modified its proposed $350 million refinery to reduce by half the amount of bunker fuel produced.

As originally outlined, the refinery would have produced 40 per cent of its output in the form of bunker fuel. The petroleum industry average is between 12 and 15 per cent bunker fuel.

Cliff Goddard, B.C. corporate manager with Imperial Oil Ltd., had said Tuesday the heavy emphasis on bunker fuel could only lead to hefty losses by the government refinery.

He said bunker oil, used mainly in B.C. in pulp and cement plants and in ships, is a glut on the market now and can be bought at prices lower than that of Alberta crude oil landed in the Vancouver area for refining.

Lechner said Goddard's criticism was based on old information.

British Columbia Petroleum decided two weeks ago to change the design of its plant to reduce the volume of bunker fuel by half, Lechner said.

He also said the corporation is flexible and can react to any changes in its market forecasts.

Lechner also rejected figures used by Goddard in predicting an annual $50 million loss by B.C. Petroleum.

Goddard also said a BCPC refinery would either overwhelm the B.C. market or it would operate at a fraction of its rated capacity, causing losses because of idle capital investment.

Wall St. High Priests Weigh Barrett

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

It was to one of the most hallowed of these concrete halls that Premier David Barrett and his small entourage went to witness, if not to worship, on their way to shabbier, older, yet not necessarily wiser, institutions in London.

"We have to be careful about the word socialism," said one of the priests of Wall St. "Some people in this country tend to equate it with communism. The important thing is that British Columbia has a strong, resource-based economy."

It also has a budgetary surplus, which makes it unusual on this continent. And money is a much more significant world than socialism.

But Barrett has to be on best behavior, neat in regulation blue suit, to hobnob with the temple treasurers.

He is taken in hand, literally, by Salomon Brothers, which occupies three floors of One New York Plaza, opposite the Staten Island ferry, and greets visitors with liveried flunkeys in a sumptuous forty-second floor reception suite, littered with a few thousand dollars worth of antique furnishings.

Salomon Brothers is B.C.'s fiscal agent, and its executives groom Barrett for private sessions with the men who have the gold that streets are paved with.

They also see that the premier is neither at loose ends nor underfed during his two-day visit, providing two luncheons, a dinner and tickets to a baseball game.

Their interest is not political, but purely business. They get a piece of the action when B.C. raises money.

This has just happened, to everbody's satisfaction — Barrett, Wall St., and Salomon Bros. A $125 million B.C. Hydro bond issue was postponed in March, when the going interst rate was between 10 and 11 per cent. Last year Hydro had been stung for 10 and a quarter per cent on a $100 millon issue. But the postponed issue went out at the beginning of this month at nine and five-eighths.

This was such a relief that B.C. decided to grab an extra $25 million while the going was good, and bumped up the bond issue accordingly.

"As it turns out, if they'd waited until next month the

11th Hour Drive Hits Labor Code Changes

The labor movement in B.C. has launched an 11th hour attack on proposed amendments to the B.C. Labor Code, saying the amendments will weaken, not improve the code.

Victoria Labor Council Wednesday sent a telegram to Labor Minister Bill King asking that the amendments contained in Bill 84 be held up until the union movement has a chance to study them. Affiliates of the council were also urged to send telegrams to King.

But the postponement campaign is likely too late. The bill is expected to come before the house for second and third readings possibly today and no later than early next week.

The telegram campaign originated with the B.C. Federation of Labor.

VLC president John Schibli said the labor movement took exception to some amendments more than others, "but the exception is really to the whole product."

Schibli said that none of the amendments had come from the trade union movement.

One of the amendments, he said, which prohibits a union from asking for disciplinary action against a member who joins another trade union within the same plant, opens the door to an open-shop policy in the province where new employees would not have to join the union certified in the place of business, he said.

"What will follow is a hell of a lot of chaos," Schibli said.

Onother of the amendments gives "tremendous" added power to the LRB, Schibli said.

During a five-hour meeting between Deputy Labor Minister James Matkin and officials of the B.C. Federation of Labor, Matkin said that most of the amendments were housekeeping amendments, Schibli said.

"But if that's all they are, we should be able to study them further," he said.

The Association of Professional Engineers of B.C. is also asking that Bill 84 be postponed or altered.

Under the amendments, professionals such as engineers who were previously excluded from coverage under the Labor Code, would now be allowed bargaining rights.

But engineers' association president D. K. Bannerman of Vancouver said the changes proposed in Bill 84 are inadequate if they are intended to make collective bargaining truly available to professional groups.

The engineers feel that because of the small number of professionals in any given work place, they would be absorbed into other trade unions, rather than forming professional unions of their own.

"The large number of management exclusions will decimate potential homogenous units of professional engineers," Bannerman told the labor minister in a letter.

The engineers are asking that separate and distinct legislation be enacted to deal with professional groups, or that Bill 84 be postponed until all professional groups have a chance to look at it and register their objections.

New Drug System Gets Hospital Nod

The regional hospital and Health Planning Commission Wednesday night approved spending $3,500 to launch a new drug distribution system at four extended care hospitals.

Under the system, daily doses of medication for the long-term patients is prepackaged in laminated cards holding a month's supply in plastic bubbles. The plastic bubbles can be punched out to release the day's dosage.

The system almost eliminates the possibility of error, nursing time is substantially reduced and a vastly superior service can be provided, said John Clark, director of hospital planning, in a memo to the commisson.

Commission members agreed and suggested the new drug dispensing system, which is endorsed by the provincial Hospital Programs branch might some day expand to cover all hospitals in the region.

For the time being it will be introduced at Mount Tolmie, St. Mary's Priory, Glengarry and Aberdeen Hospitals, all operated by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society.

In other business, the commission endorsed a proposal from one of its advisory committees that an in-depth study be done of the region's projected needs for extended care, intermediate care, personal care and home care programs, including psychiatric care.

The committee of mostly area doctors said it wants to stress that a serious situation exists and the commission was told again of how 76 beds in Victoria's two general hospitals are occupied by patients who don't need that expensive level of care but have nowhere else to go.

The advisory committee will be asked for a recommendation on who should underake the study.

The cost of delays on construction projects was underlined by a case involving a parking lot at Victoria General Hospital.

The commission was told the price for paving the lot rose from $6,563 to $8,350 during the time the project was being considered by the provincial government and regional handling was delayed by a strike-lockout of civic employees. The province has since refused to pay a share of the increased price.

The commission voted to pay the difference and then take up the case with the province because it involves an important principle. The province took 68 days to approve the project and quotes are only good for 30 days.

HIGHWAYS OPEN

PALM SPRINGS (UPI) — Desert highways were open again today after sand storms driven by hurricane force winds up to 90 miles an hour piled roads with sand, burying autos to windshield level and stranding thousands.

Small cities and towns throughout the desert region filled up with travellers Tuesday night and Wednesday as the shrieking storm brought traffic to a halt on major highways leading to Las Vegas and Palm Springs.

The highway patrol warned today that motorists could take to desert highways only at their own risk.

bloodier. It would be costly and inevitably lead to an oil embargo. We think there has to be movement. There can't be stalemate and stagnation."

Peres told a meeting of the Jewish Agency executive council in Jerusalem, "There is a fresh and new trend — a trend for a peaceful settlement in some of the Arab countries."

"But this is contradicted by another trend — the military buildup on the Arab side. There is a wish for peace and a buildup for war," Peres said.

The secretary-general of the ruling Israeli Labor party, meanwhile, said today in Tel Aviv the party has adopted a map for Israel's final peace borders that annexes the Golan Heights and the Gaza Strip.

Meir Zarmi told a gathering of Labor party kibbutz members that the new map:

—Annexes the Golan Heights, captured from Syria in the 1967 six-day war.

—Annexes the Gaza Strip, captured from Egypt in 1967.

—Leaves open for future negotiation the sovereignty of the west bank, won from Jordan eight years ago.

—Leaves open for negotiation the sovereignty of Sharm el Sheikh at the southern tip of Egypt's Sinai Peninsula, as well as a narrow strip of land on the east coast of the Gulf of Aqaba connecting Israel proper with the strategic strait.

A Labor party spokesman said all party cabinet ministers, including Rabin, Peres and Foreign Minister Yigal Allon, were obliged to support the map should it ever come up for a vote within the government.

rate would have been even better," our priestly informant confided.

Never mind, Hydro will have to come back in September for more.

The object of Barrett's visit and Salomon Bros. concern was to ensure that the odds will continue favorable. It smarts just a bit that Ontario has a triple A rating from Moody's, while B.C. is adouble A. The difference is up to half of one per cent in interest rates.

Barrett himself described it as "more of an update trip than anything else." He felt that he had made a reasonbaly good impression at sessions which were exploratory and explanatory on both sides. He tried to explain that there isn't a revolution and that his government seeks partnerships rather than confrontations with free enterprise.

Where the provincial government had intervened in the economy, he claimed, the effect had been beneficial rather than disruptive.

The high priests of Wall St. are notoriously stone-faced when scruffy reporters ask them questions. But some of them plan to go to B.C. this fall to have a look for themselves.

They found, at least, that Barrett had only one head and did not wear a red tie. They noticed certain similarities of style with the previous premier and were somewhat reassured that the present premier has retained that human calculator Gerry Bryson as deputy finance minister and ear-whisperer.

They were a little uneasy about the premier's love of coarse language and some of those rather hairy political brawls reported in B.C. Yet despite this, Barrett has had a remarkably good press in the U.S.

After all, a government represented on Wall St. by the firm that made Treasury Secretary William Simon an alumnus and that also represents Macmillan-Bloedel, Pepscio and New York state, not city, can't be that goofy, surely?

Business is business.

Yesterday's satellite picture confirmed the broad band of low cloud and fog affecting just about the entire North American west coast. No change is expected today in this pattern of low cloud and fog on the B.C. coast. The prospects dampen somewhat for Friday as a disturbance now moving across the northern Gulf of Alaska is forecast to recurve and move down the B.C. coast. This will spread some light rain into the north coast Thursday night. Temperatures are forecast to show only minor variations over the next two days.

Community News Round-Up

Repairs to a building on Fernwood to make it suitable for a drop-in centre will be too costly and the idea has been shelved, says Tom Lee, president of the FERNWOOD COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION.

Lee told the general meeting of the group this week the association needs larger quarters and it was hoped that the building at 2009 Fernwood could be fixed.

But after a look by inspectors and the executive it was found that the building required major repairs.

The present drop-in centre is on Gladstone and the association's lease runs out at the end of this month. Lee said the association is trying to contact the owner, former president Ron Spence, to see if the lease can be extended.

Lee said the executive is open to suggestions on new premises but said it should be as close to the centre of the community as possible.

Also at the meeting the first Citizen Award was presented, with Dave Garman named the winner for 1974 and Fernwood community co-ordinator Brian Lewis the recipient for this year. (See picture at right).

Garman, who was one of the founders of the community association and its first president, died in May.

The award was accepted by his youngest son Geoffrey. Lewis was named community co-ordinator in January of this year and is credited with revitalizing the association and interest in Fernwood.

Ald. Mike Young made the presentation saying "Fernwood has done more for itself than any other group in the city who only seem to ask that something be done for them."

He praised both the efforts of Garman in launching the association and to Lewis for his current efforts.

In other business a talk by John Dickman on organic gardening was well received by the members.

He showed samples of earth from his own property — before and after compost was added — and got across the message that organic gardening was natural . . . it's just the replacing of one plant from nature with another that is useful to the gardener.

Planning has started on the Fernwood Festival to be held Aug. 23. It will start at 11 and end with a street dance at night. A beard growing contest will start June 27.

The annual meeting of the Victoria chapter of the Pacific Community Self-Development Society (COOL-AID) will be held July 3 at 8 p.m. in the Cool-Aid Centre at the corner of Fernwood and Gladstone.

There will be election of officers and reports on the various projects.

President Frances Chapman said she is willing to seek re-election.

A series of week-long back-pack and canoe trips are planned this summer by the VICTORIA BOYS AND GIRLS CLUB.

The trips will be to Strathcona Park, Forbidden Plateau and the Banfield area. The cost is $40 per person which includes transportation, food and most equipment.

This is only one of the programs offered. Others will be from the main centre on Yates and the other in the Colwood-Langford area.

From the Langford club the summer day camp program is for children 7 to 12 years of age.

With the exception of occassional overnight trips the program will be run in a close-to-home location that provides a camping environment.

The children will participate in arts and crafts, hiking, trips, nature lore, group games, singing, and basic camping skills.

The day camp dates are July 7 to 18 at Langford Elementary; July 21 to Aug. 1 at Glen Lake school; Aug. 4 to 12 at Millstream school and Aug. 18 to 29 at Colwood Elementary.

The hours are from 10 to 4:30 Monday through to Friday. Registration is $5 and there is a limit of 40 children per school.

At the Yates Street centre, where a similar program will be run, registrations will be held from June 23 to 26 from 1 to 5 p.m. or the children can register now at their school.

In Victoria children from 8 to 12 years will be accommodated and dates are the same as for the Langford group as is the registration fee.

Children must bring their own bag lunches and must wear clothing appropriate to the weather and type of activity.

Any 14 and 15 year olds are welcome to volunteer as counsellors-in-training.

At the Victoria Centre, information may be had from Toby Rabinovitz at 383-1101.

Victoria's FRIENDSHIP CENTRE in the basement of the Royal Olympic Hotel is just $9 short of having enough money to pay rent to the end of August.

Len. Orvis, one of the workers, said appeals for funds through the newspaper helped the centre through its hardship.

The centre, which tries to help sober alcoholics and others, has faced financial problems since last April and several times was on the verge of closing.

Also working in the centre is Pat Salmond. It is open 12 hours a day and Orvis said it is hoped the crafts program will be expanded.

The centre is now operating again after a week's closure for re-organization.

Orvis said there is a great need for carpentry tools and further donations to keep the centre open after August.

"We're going to relax and have a good time with lots of trips to the beach."

That's the goal of the day care service operating out of the JAMES BAY COMMUNITY SCHOOL.

It now runs from 7 to 9 a.m. and 3:30 to 5:30 but once school is out for the summer holidays, the day care will be continous from 7 to 5:30.

Ann Berry, in charge of the program, said it will be expanded to include drama, arts and crafts, field trips and will include visits by bands and drama groups.

Day care is for children from 6 to 8 years of age and the centre is licensed by the department of human resources for 20 children.

Berry said 14 have registered for July and 11 for August.

Children do not have to be from James Bay to participate.

Canada's Nuclear Hypocrisy

Since India exploded an atomic device with the help of a nuclear reactor supplied by Canada the government has been defensive about its role in the proliferation of nuclear weapons. Now Conservative and NDP opposition members are calling for a moratorium on Canadian reactor sales. But the cat is out of the bag, as it were. According to U.S. figures nuclear reactors (operating, on order or planned) number 426 in 38 countries — up from 348 only one year ago. Noble sentiments on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons are as old-fashioned as gunpowder in the harsh light of these statistics.

That doesn't mean Canada should pass out nuclear technology like lollipops at a candy store opening. Our impending reactor sales to South Korea and Argentina can be attacked on several grounds. Neither country has signed the non-proliferation treaty, an indication that they are not against their own miniature forces de frappes.

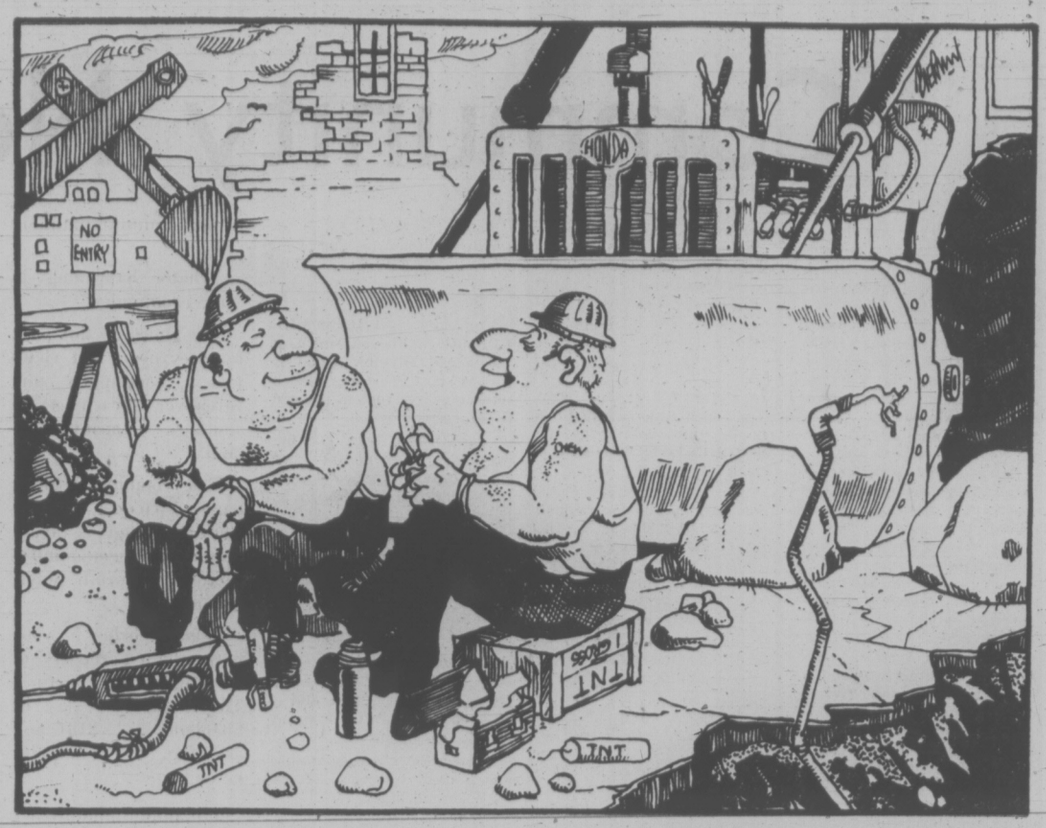
Both countries have volatile histories. Argentina, along with Brazil, is emerging as one of the major powers in South America. A mini arms race has been going on between the two countries for many years. South Korea is a right-wing dictatorship that could be embroiled with the communist north again. If the Americans pulled out their 40,000 troops and a war with the north ensued, would Seoul restrain itself from dropping a nuclear bomb on Pyongyang?

As Prime Minister Trudeau pointed out safeguards against misuse are not foolproof when it comes to nuclear technology, although Canada has considerably stiffened its conditions of sale following the Indian incident. In a sense, the government's attitude seems to be, "everybody's doing it, why not us?"

Up to a point this is true. A U.S.-supplied nuclear reactor is already being constructed in South Korea. But when the government resorts to telling us that nuclear technology is one of the most certain ways of lifting poorer countries into the 20th century, the argument becomes ludicrous. Canada sells these things, $200 million or more a crack. While some reactors are dispatched under foreign aid terms, client countries still need Canadian technology and uranium to run them. Altruism is a long way down the line from the balance of payments.

If Canada is going to assume such an international moral stance it has no business selling reactors to unstable countries like South Korea and Argentina.

Yet the government refuses to face up to the public reality that nuclear non-proliferation is a dead issue, thanks in part to Canada's zeal in selling reactors to countries like India. We clench pious fists in the United Nations general assembly, at the same time selling for all we're worth in the world marketplace. It's a sleazy performance. Ottawa should make the rhetoric match the facts.



". . . how about if we make Douglas no entry and Fort one lane traffic for a change . . . ?"

Price-Fixing and the Professions

The United States supreme court, nine lawyers all, this week dropped a bomb into oak-panelled law offices across the U.S. which may have spreading repercussions elsewhere in the legal world too. The court decided that lawyers are not immune from American anti-trust legislation when the local bar associations engage in activity that restrains competition.

The case on which the decision was made involved a couple who asked 20 lawyers in the Washington, D.C., area what their fee would be for a title search on a house they were buying in the suburbs. All 20 set the fee at exactly $522, based on a bar association fee schedule.

Chief Justice Warren Burger said the fee schedule is a "classic illustration of price fixing" but he said in the court's decision that the justices were ruling on only the particular case and not attempting to demolish all fee-setting by professional groups. But the consumer advocate lawyers who took up the house-hunting couple's case are undoubtedly encouraged by this victory. If lawyers can be prosecuted under the Sherman Antitrust Act for price-fixing activities, can doctors, dentists, architects, real estate agencies and even barbers feel immune?

The professions are not businesses like dry cleaners or supermarkets, as Burger acknowledged in the decision, yet competition in this area of private enterprise might not be as bad as the lawyers and other professionals fear. Do drivers always buy the cheapest advertised car? Or do shoppers buy groceries strictly by lowest price? A premium for quality goods and services will always be paid.

It's an area of consumerism largely neglected by the hardware-oriented consumer movement. In this country, it might profitably be pursued by provincial Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young and federal counterpart Andre Ouellet.

Key to Germany's Miracles

BONN — The first German miracle was the startling recovery from the Second World War, which had left this country partitioned, ruined, helpless and filled with refugees. Armed with an excellent American-inspired constitution, led by tough, wise, old Konrad Adenauer, its factories re-equipped with modern machinery, and helped by a daring currency reform, the hard-working German people, united in misery, began their race to prosperity.

The second German miracle is on stage right now. This is the demonstration of how a still-divided land, lacking most raw materials, has managed to surmount the crises of inflation, recession and energy shortages better than any other industrialized country. Why, I asked chancellor Helmut Schmidt? How was it managed?

Schmidt is a middle-sized, strong, well-made Social Democrat from Hamburg who has been in office only a year. He speaks good English and has an excellent competence in government affairs, having served as minister both of defence and finance.

One Salient Point

He acknowledges that the series of governments here since the federal republic began in 1949 has been pretty effective. But for him there is a single basic key to the remarkable current success which is observed enviously by other lands.

"One thing stands out vis-a-vis the rest of Europe," he says. "That is the role of the German trade union movement. There is only one labor federation here as compared with two or three rival associations in some countries. And in this single federation there are only about 16 large unions as compared with up to a hundred, often competing, elsewhere.

"And our unions have much greater and more useful influence than in most nations. They have gained experience over the years and they have behaved well. Also, governments have been granting an ever greater role to the unions. This is beneficial to workers, to enterprises, and to the national economy as a whole."

At this point it is proper to interpolate that Schmidt makes no claim to exclusive wisdom for his Social Democrats in this respect. Until 1969 the federal republic was dominated by conservative and centralist Catholics. Yet since then, the improvement of labor's position was accelerated.

"In Italy, Belgium and Britain — to name but a few — the number of strike

HELMUT SCHMIDT

days lost to production is far higher than in Germany," the chancellor adds. "Strikes are rare here. Our unions prefer to negotiate and compromise. And, as a consequence, they have gained higher real wages than in any other European country.

"Restrained functioning of our unions has paid off in wages for workers and in calm for our society. This is very different from the behavior of many unions in Europe or in the U.S.A. I consider this the most important factor in enabling us to surmount the crises you mention."

At the same time Schmidt stresses: "German laborers and white-collar workers have a feeling of being respected. They have gained legislative advantages on social security during the last 25 years, more than in other lands. They have also gained rights in the realm of social justice that don't exist elsewhere.

"In the coal, iron and steel industries, unions elect their workers' councils by secret ballot. They occupy 50 per cent of the seats on boards of directors in an enterprise. And we are about to enlarge this system by spreading it to other major industries."

With these claims in mind—claims upheld by facts—I asked if the chancellor had any suggestions on what other industrialized lands should do to curb inflation. He replied:

"They should have acted earlier than 1975. The greatest evil is no longer inflation but unemployment. Imagine, in the United States you are approaching unemployment of 10 per cent of your entire labor force. This would be considered unbearable in Germany.

None in Britain

"In the recession that accompanies inflation it is today most important to fight unemployment. Not that we are abandoning pressure against inflation (down to 5.9 per cent from 7.6 per cent early last year). We have simply shifted priorities. We would like to see many of our friends do this."

The trouble is that these common sense formulas require strong, intelligent government, wise labor-capital relations, awareness of a national community of interest, each of which the Federal Republic of Germany has.

Above everything, a sense of direction is needed, an idea of which fork in the road to take and where it leads. It is perplexing to recall that while all the above applies in partitioned Germany which lost the war, none or little of it applies in Britain, which won it.

Parties Scoop Up TV Time

OTTAWA — Political parties hold leadership conventions primarily to a) pick a leader, b) decide on new policy direction, c) scoop up all the television coverage that's going.

The last choice wins of course. As the latest example, the Conservatives have postponed by one week, to Feb. 19-21, the still unofficial dates for their 1976 convention to elect a successor to Robert Stanfield.

The reason — the original dates coincided with the winter Olympic games in Innsbruck, Austria, and all of the CTV network's mobile equipment will be away filming the skiers as a kind of dress rehearsal for the summer Olympics in Montreal.

The New Democratic Party in the meantime has scored the first success of its leadership convention to be held in Winnipeg next month. The CBC has scheduled 12 hours of live coverage of the affair. Just how all those hours will be filled up boggles the imagination. MP Lorne Nystrom may get close enough to acting leader Ed Broadbent to make the race exciting, but still, 12 hours of Broadbent and Nystrom?

To give equal time in the best CBC tradition to all the political parties, the Liberal convention scheduled for Ottawa in November shoukin't be wholly ignored.

No one's going to challenge Prime Minister Trudeau's leadership. Instead, the order for the two days is policy debate — a discussion on the concept of the no-growth society, on how to make the bureaucracy more responsive to politicians and to the public and on some controversial human rights issues, including capital punishment and abortion. Don't expect to be glued to your TV armchair though. The Liberals are a pretty disciplined lot.

As much as Canadians-in-the-street, governors-general have to cope with the fact that it may be better to buy a house now and swallow the high mortgage rates then to hang on until later and risk having to swallow even higher mortgage rates. This is the reason that Jules Leger has just bought himself a condominium, at 20 The Driveway, a new, downtown, high-rise that overlooks the Rideau Canal.

The purchase, naturally, triggers speculation that Leger, who suffered a severe stroke a year ago and whose speech faculties are not yet fully recovered, plans to take early retirement. A call to Government House confirms that Leger has no plans to retire before the end of his term; the condominium is only "an intelligent investment."

An interesting and a potentially significant policy shift is taking place within the Science Council. In the past the council has churned out reports, all solid enough but most with limited political impact, on just about every conceivable aspect of science. The council now plans to concentrate on a couple of high-profile policy areas.

JULES LEGER
. . . makes a good investment

The two policy subjects to which the council almost certainly will commit its prestige and reputation rather than scattering its energies are "the conserver society," a topic that covers the concept of restricted economic growth and of conservation life styles, and "technological sovereignty."

The council already has approved the conserver society theme. Technological sovereignty, which means developing a capability for independent Canadian action in key fields such as energy, oceanography, transportation and agriculture, and of finding the money to do this by cutting back on other scientific endeavors, will be debated by the council under its new chairman at the end of this month.

Aside from trying to sell the political merits of the two policy issues, the council's work would be re-organized so that most projects fall under one or other of the two headings.

Which mandarin gets which post is a subject of intense interest to mandarins, their spouses and to the almost-mandarins who didn't quiet make it this time round. The rest of the country turns to the sports pages. A couple of recent postings, though, merit wider attention.

First, Energy Minister Donald MacDonald argued against the recent appointment of Gordon McNabb as his new deputy minister, but was overruled. MacDonald's acquiesence in a posting he objected to can be read as a sign MacDonald knows he won't be staying long in the energy portfolio. One place that MacDonald might go — to Trade and Commerce to replace Alastair Gillespie.

Second, the promotion of C. R. (Buzz) Nixon from the Privy Council staff to be deputy-minister of defence. The civil service establishment of former privy council clerk Gordon Robertson, public service commissioner John Carson and treasury board secretary Gordon Osbaldeston, all favoured another candidate.

The new privy council clerk, Michael Pitfield, backed Nixon, partly because both are management science devotees, that is flip charts, critical paths, computer printouts and all that stuff. The interest in the result is that this is the first time that Pitfield has made his weight felt in senior appointments since he moved to the east block last January.

UN Nuclear Power

All proliferation of atomic energy for peaceful purposes should have been under the direct control of strong United Nations international forces of guards and scientists, with all countries needing atomic energy for the generation of electric power, agreeing to have the installations ceded to the UN as extraterritorial enclaves.

The poor countries shouldn't be deprived of the chance of cheap power, nor should the rest of the world gamble its safety in the process.

Most UN dreams founder for lack of funds and backing, but a properly controlled world-wide generation of cheap atomic power would require and provide an earned surcharge on all world atomic power generation to pay for the safeguards and give the opportunity for its proliferated use. — V. R. Cragg, 799 Byng Street.

Free Enterprise

Our western democracy depends on the private entrepreneur for economic stability. The productivity of our modern machinery and technology now make it possible to think of a future of plenty for all. In industrial countries, this belief is proving to be right. With our increasing technology, democracy will lead to participatory democracy, which will insure individual liberty and majority rule.

There are those who attack our western system of politics because of its dependence on the private enterprising system. They call us capitalists. Capitalism is a system where individuals offer their labors on the market to those who possess accumulated capital with which they can employ other. I prefer to call them private enterprisers.

To put a new word on the political scene, I would call the socialists "state capitalists." The state capitalists would not change anything other than the employer. Instead of the private entrepreneur, the government would be the employer and government officials would become capitalists. State capitalism would eventually destroy our system of democracy due to the mere fact that the government would in turn become dictatorial.

If our standard of living is to remain at all economic levels of society, we must insure our production per capita by offsetting the work stoppages. Governments should be servants of the people, not vice-versa. Governments are there to govern not to endanger our future as a democratic nation. — Dennis D. Dorosz, Victoria.

Mary on the Move

In the June 14 Times, on reading the article by Elizabeth Forbes, Islanders Gyrate to California, I notice that the convention of the Gyros was to be held on the Princess Mary at Long Beach. Since when has the Princess Mary been towed there? My personal knowledge is that it is the old Queen Mary that is docked at Long Beach. This error is repeated in the article and so will someone please put the Princess Mary where it belongs or else we shall have a long way to go to have a bite to eat. — A. D. McCrindle, 404-999 Heywood Way.

PHILADELPHIA — Members of a national provisional committee met here to begin discussions with a view to obtaining the support of governments and public opinion for a league of nations. Former U.S. president William Howard Taft was selected as chairman of the conference. Edward A. Filene of Boston told the conference there should be a modification in the scheme of the league so that economic pressure can be brought to bear on nations that are intent on going to war, before the league has used its full power to prevent hostilities.

The Real Threat to Capitalism Is . . . Capitalism

By BILL MOYERS
(A column in Newsweek)

Something called Operation Freedom came out swinging the other day, with 44 vice presidents on its masthead and a quarter-page ad in The New York Times summoning us "to prevent the socialization of our government, the destruction of the goose that laid the golden egg, and the creation of a totalitarian police state." Sen. Barry Goldwater is a vice president. Likewise Lowell Thomas, Gen. James A. Van Fleet and Adm. Arleigh Burke. Yes, and William Loeb, the New Hampshire publisher whose social views were last enlightened, rumor has it, by the council of advisers to the Duke of Cadiz.

Their entreaty is to save capitalism. "Our home-front radicals, extremists, Marxists and some misguided intellectuals are on the march with well-organized plans to socialize America," the ad proclaimed. "Under the Marxist plan, our already burdened taxpayers would lose their savings to the menace of socialism and business confidence and private initiative would be destroyed . . . How long will the American people remain silent while the radical and Marxist elements undermine our free institutions and free-enterprise system and substitute a foreign form of socialism?"

Now there are people in the U.S. who believe we should go a different road. Some are thoughtful people like Michael Harrington, the socialist writer who did so much in the 1960s to illuminate the poverty among us. Some are also "radicals, extremists and Marxists," although they seem less adept at overthrowing the government than, in the manner of Patty Hearst, eluding it.

The real threat to "the free-enterprise system" does not come from "radicals, extremists and Marxists," some of whom make too much money as FBI informers to desire seriously the fall of the status quo. The danger to capitalism — the true "enemy within" — is capitalism itself; more precisely, capitalism that says anything goes and allows an excess of provocative extremities no system can long abide.

This concerns more than the recent revelations about the way business often does business, although that is disturbing enough. Abroad, American companies like United Brands and Gulf Oil have engaged in widespread bribery of government officials. At home, it's hard to keep up with the number of major corporations that have negotiated guilty pleas for illegal campaign contributions. The chairman of Northrup Corp. actually arranged a complex system of "laundering" money for the White House through foreign channels, lied about his contributions, and then engaged some of his own colleagues in the cover-up. For similar offenses Richard Nixon was forced to resign in disgrace. Chairman Thomas V. Jones is still on the job at Northrup. It may be true that bribes are a basic business expense indulged by trade unions, bankers, doctors, builders and even publishers, but we are kidding ourselves if we think capitalism can long survive such sanctioned corruption.

The second and greater threat that ought to be worrying the friends of capitalism is the ruin, waste and neglect we continue to tolerate in our society. To quote a recent study by the United States Catholic Conference, our system is "inherently tilted" to favor a small percentage of the population. Consider the data: the top 20 per cent of our population receives 41 per cent of all income; the wealthiest 5 per cent owns 83 per cent of all corporate stocks; half our families — the poor and working class — average less than $500 in savings; fewer than 2 per cent of all taxpayers receive three-fourths of all dividends and capital gains; the top 1.2 per cent of households own 65 per cent of all investments, and so on.

But the problem goes beyond income distribution; spreading the wealth from the top around at the bottom is not going to help the working class very much. It is a question of equity, not equality; whether the claim of the total community is such that all of us, whatever our station, feel that there is a public interest being served and that the nation as a whole is committed to building the best possible society.

This is absent now. It is absent because democracy in American has become a lobocracy. Organized pressure, not the ballot box, is the arbiter of public policy, and the result, which Operation Freedom seems not to have noticed, is that the government has already been socialized, for private profit. Capitalism couldn't even sell the F-16 jet fighter to belgium last week until the U.S. Government offered to spend 30 million tax dollars to buy Belgian machine guns as a "sweetener" to the deal; Presidents go to Europe now to peddle. And so entwined are the large public and private bureaucracies that the economic system itself guarantees that "materialistic individualism," the basic ethic of the capitalist drive, almost inevitably triumphs over any vision of the common good.

When co-opted by economic organizations, "materialistic individualism" still means: "Me first." It is what caused Northrup, "after weighing the risks attendant in making corporate political contributions against the probability of suffering corporate disadvantage," to come down, in Thomas V. Jones's words, "on the side of the corporation and its shareholders." Hang the law! In a larger sense, the result is that while heavy taxes are collected in this country, the public sector benefits only secondarily. If you want a monument to public waste in the midst of private gain, look around: at our cities, our unemployed, our railroads, our nursing homes, our rivers and streams, our libraries and (where they exist) our subways.

From defense to housing, public resources and public problems are constantly exploited for the benefit of profit-takers, and large private advantages accrue without regard to social consequence. Thus, to quote the Catholic report again, "the poor and working class pay a disproportionate price for housing because private lenders, profiting at public expense, took advantage of government programs which benefit the private market. Meanwhile, the affluent receive subsidies which reinforce their wealth."

You realize what disparities this creates when you walk through the Bronx in New York, or go across the tracks in a small Southern town, or visit a workingclass neighborhood in Gary and are hit squarely in the face with the havoc in public services that seems a permanent feature of contemporary America. It cannot last this way, you tell yourself; it will fall from the weight of the obvious.

I say this confessing that I have a soft spot in my heart for profits. I have run a large company and even now am a beneficiary of this magazine's ability to turn a profit. I also value a good loophole. But that cannot stifle the belief that Operation Freedom is baying at the wrong moon. If things continue as they are, all the enemies of capitalism will have to do is to wait while we suffocate in our own superfluities.

The NDP: A Party in Search of Direction

By CHRISTINA NEWMAN
The Globe and Mail

There is a witty professor of political science at the University of Toronto who runs an undergraduate seminar to which he regularly invites pooh-bahs from the three main political parties as guest lecturers. This man claims that even if he were to shut his eyes and mind to his visitors' identities, he could still place them in terms of party affiliation by the way they talk to him in the chitchat before the seminar begins.

"The Liberals," he says, "always ask some variation of 'What are the new ideas — what are the kids concerned about?' with a view to glomming on to those ideas and making them part of the Liberal success pattern. The Tories always want to know 'How can we beat those damn Grits?' And the NDPers, God bless and help them because they sure don't know how to help themselves, always say plaintively, 'Why don't the voters love us? We're so good and true and we've brought about so many important changes in this country to the benefit of all its citizenry.'"

There is growing evidence this spring that even all those old NDPers who have continued to say, as they do at the professor's seminar, "We are loveable, ergo we should overcome, are frustrated with their powerlessness and are beginning to wonder whether the federal party can ever change from a gadfly group that pricks the conscience of the nation into a popular party that can hope eventually to become an official opposition and then a government.

Weak Candidates

To the disaffected NDPers what was particularly disconcerting in last summer's campaign was the federal party's inability to field new candidates of quality, or to attract young voters. In British Columbia, for instance, first-time candidates in what had been thought of as rock-solid NDP seats were often mediocrities, according to party sources. MLAs, such as Colin Gabelmann, who could have made a federal run, just didn't want to be part of what they felt was a rush to disaster and would no longer buy the old comforting argument that the federal NDP's downward trend in that campaign was 'merely cyclical.'

To the hopeful in the party, the very willingness of its members to state openly now that they feel something is drastically wrong with their orientation may mark the beginning of a change of attitude and a change in fortunes.

Dave Barrett, for example, has drawn closer to the federal party in the last few months and his endorsement of Ed Broadbent for the leadership is seen as part of the new-found desire to make peace with the federalists rather than a denial of Rosemary Brown, who comes out of his own caucus. The decision of Cliff Scotton, the party's national secretary, to take a year's leave of absence to work for Barrett in B.C. is also part of a new and still dimly realized desire in the federal and provincial wings to draw together, reversing the trend of the past decade.

Union Support Low

What's embarrassing to many socialists is how small the party's support actually is within the unskilled working class. Most party adherents now fall into two classifications: academics and high school teachers or skilled workers. They party's union support is surprisingly low. Only a third of the work force in Canada is unionized in any case and polls taken after the 1974 election showed that the NDP trailed both the Liberals and the Conservatives in support from union households. Even in unions that are strongly pro-NDP, such as the Steelworkers and the Auto Workers, there is no evidence that their leaders' exhortations to support the party have that much effect on the rank-and-file's voting patterns. It's the opinion of some NDPers, notably John Harney, that the union bosses are almost as remote from the NDP's rightful constituency as an academic in his ivied study.

In any case, it's widely and sadly acknowledged in the party that Canadians don't see themselves as belonging to a stratified society. The union man is far more likely to believe he's middle class than otherwise and the necessity to affiliate himself with a working-class party escapes him. This attitude extends up and down the income scale from plumbers to postmen. One of David Lewis's daughters was campaigning in the Ontario by-election in Carleton East last year in an Ontario Housing Corporation complex and at door after door she was told firmly by the inhabitants that they weren't interested in socialism because it was only for the working class.

Opinions on how to broaden the party's base and attract the workers' vote vary. Harney wants to restructure the party setup to bring the federal council closer to working people and give rank-and-file union members clearly visible access to decision-making.

There is also a new belief in the need for political education at the trade-union level. Michael Lewis, the youngest and supposedly politically shrewdest of David Lewis's children, has spent two years doing just that, speaking at union membership meetings, putting out mimeographed sheets on issues for union consumption, showing films, trying hard to get the rank-and-file to understand the party.

At 30, Michael Lewis has a legendary reputation for being able to read the electoral mind. Two weeks before the last federal campaign was over he told his brother Stephen that their father was going to lose his seat. Stephen remonstrated that he couldn't believe this, that if David lost, then so would Terry Grier and John Harney and it would be a disaster. That's right, Michael said. And, of course, it was.

The endless rehashing of what went wrong in that campaign has died down now. Nobody talks much any more about how David Lewis got squeezed between the Liberal's slickness and the electorate's fear of the Tories' wage-and-price-control policy. What everybody does talk about is how to increase the number of NDP seats next time — not just to bring it close to the '72 results but by dramatic numbers.

There are three schools of thought on how to do this, all of them maintaining that preparations for the next election have to start now. Some believe that a mammoth effort should be made to translate provincial support to the federal scene, which would mean winning something like 60 seats rather than 16. One way to do this, the argument runs, would be to knit up provincial support by sending out a federal newsletter regularly to key workers across the country or to field a road show of federal MPs who would move into provincial association meetings, for consciousness-raising sessions on federal issues.

Quebec Beachhead

Others think that the fact there have been two federal elections since the provincial regimes have come to power and their local strength never did translate federally disqualifies this approach. They believe the thing to do is to concentrate on intensive organizing in the more than 50 federal seats where the NDP has come first or second in recent years and that way the party could come into the House in '78 with a considerably larger caucus and hope for further gains in '82.

Still another group points out that while both these techniques have value, they smack of the "Gordon Churchill syndrome," which means the fragmenting of Canada entirely, with the NDP, like the Conservative Party before it, seeking support only in the English-speaking areas west of the Quebec border. They want to make the famous beachhead in Quebec, either through some kind of accommodation with Rene Levesque and the Parti Quebecois or through reviving the interest of Robert Cliche who ran for the party in Duvernais in '68 and lost to Eric Kierans or by persuading some left-leaning disaffected Liberals, such as Pierre de Bane, to turn NDP.

Waffle Credo

"The terrible truth," Stephen Lewis says, "is that the federal party has to break into Quebec to give ourselves and Canadians a sense that we are really a national party.

"Sure we need Quebec support," says a Toronto academic who is also a longtime NDPer. "But more than that, more than anything else, we need a new policy direction. The party has seen realized all those social welfare measures that seemed so vital in the thirties. Even the provincial regimes, in bringing down auto insurance or mincome payments or better medical benefits, are simply refining old ideas. The Liberals have created the social welfare state and when Marc Lalonde produces his guaranteed annual income legislation, probably within two years, we'll look less relevant than ever. One of the reasons the Waffle did so well in 1971 was that is exuded relevance. The fact that so many of its members were completely ignorant of how the NDP works and were out to change the world in weeks, if not days, doesn't mean they shouldn't have been listened to. They articulated a credo."

What the new credo of the NDP should be has not yet been clearly analyzed within the party, much less articulated. Ironically, some of the ideas that currently have resonance among NDP intellectuals are close to what the Wafflers were saying five years ago, primarily that having realized its social welfare aims, the left has to raise basic questions about the economic structure of Canada, and to point out to the electorate that the country is dominated by a small number of corporations and that in order to control the immense power they wield the tax structure has to be drastically revised with a view to income redistribution.

Early in his leadership campaign, Ed Broadbent was sitting in his House of Commons office smoking a cigar and talking about the problems of articulating to Canadians what it means to them to live in a society dominated by a corporate elite.

"Ever since I got into politics, I've tried to think how the ideas that are important to me will sound to the guys I went to school with when I was a kid in Oshawa. It's terribly hard to get across the notion that it's wrong for big companies to earn such huge profits, that nobody should be pulling down $100,000 a year. They figure that with luck they might make that kind of money or at least their kids might. No amount of sociological theorizing will convince them that the society is structured against them. They don't dislike bigness or feel alarmed that big government and big business go hand-in-hand. They figure the big corporation creates jobs and makes the country grow. They won't or can't realize that it's also the big corporation that creates inflation, that pollutes, that wrings obscene amounts of money out of resources that belong to all of us."

Across town, in his office at Carleton University a couple of weeks later, David Lewis reiterated Broadbent's concerns in a slightly different way. "One of the things that has always puzzled me is that there is an identifiable class that rules Canada — the sociologists John Porter and Wallace Clement have documented what we've known for a long time — and it is class-conscious and becoming more entrenched. But there isn't an identifiable, let alone a class-conscious, class of the ruled. That's the NDP's dilemma now — how to convince people who live in a welfare state that they ought to want a socialist state."

Whether the New Democratic Party under Broadbent, or whoever else becomes leader in July, can crack that dilemma with a set of policies that will appeal to a broad number of Canadians remains to be seen. But there's no doubt that there is a widespread feeling in the party this spring that after 40 years in the wilderness it's time to go up the mountain and bring down another set of tablets, before the 40 years becomes 80 and the Socialists' long treasured idealism turns entirely to gall.

WHEN YOU ARE AN IMMORTAL . . .

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Dame Agatha Christie is coolly plotting murder but she won't get away with it. How could she when we already know that her intended victim is her fictional detective, Hercule Poirot? The immortal Hercule Poirot.

We understand perfectly that Dame Agatha does not wish any books to be written about Hercule after her death; that she does not wish him to be propped up and propelled into endless murder cases by writers who do not understand the extraordinary workings of his (her) mind.

However, you cannot simply put arsenic in the good Hercule's mouthwash; drop him, bound and handcuffed, into the Thames; let his car hurtle off a twisting road in the Alps, or even allow him to catch a fatal chill on the Orient Express. Mortal men do not always survive this kind of treatment, but this is no ordinary man.

Arthur Conan Doyle did his best to dispose of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Moriarty (locked in combat as they fell to their presumed deaths) but Holmes was reincarnated later by Doyle himself and carried on imperturbably after his creator ascended to another place.

No doubt Mary Shelley was under the impression that Frankenstein's monster got what was coming to him when she wrote him out. But that man of many spare parts had by then stomped his heavy-footed way into our hearts and so, again and again, he went through miraculous recoveries from what would have seemed to be certain death.

It may just be that the spike of humor will finally carry him off. Mel Brooks' Young Frankenstein may have achieved on film the consummation so devoutly wished by Mary Shelley.

Perhaps this is the only way out for Dame Agatha — or, rather, for Hercule. She will have to ridicule him to death; have him choke on his own mustaches, or fall downstairs in his underwear. Otherwise, as sure as Tarzan, King Kong, James Bond, and others too persistent to mention, he'll be back.

Now, as to the demise of Miss Marple . . .

Tougher Going Seen For Supermarkets

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The supermarket chains, which had become the glamor stocks of 1974 on the basis of their big profits, may find the going tougher in the last half of 1975.

Last year, food prices were rising faster than operating costs, including labor.

However, the situation could be reversed this year, according to a study released by the Victoria office of Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co. Ltd.

"We expect 1975 to be a more difficult year in the food distribution industry," the study says.

"Food prices will not increase at the same rate as a year ago while operating costs, particularly labor, are continuing to rise very strongly and possibly faster than food prices. Hence, profit margins in the industry will come under pressure."

The food retailing stocks are expected to be in the doldrums as a result of the changing market picture.

Food processing companies are in a slightly better situation. The meat industry has already gone through its recession with livestock and meat prices falling sharply in late 1974. The industry hit bottom during the winter and prices have started to move upwards since April.

Sugar refineries are continuing to do well.

The general merchandising industry is weathering the recession quite well, although sales of durable goods are down.

Net income of department stores is expected to be about the same level as in 1974. Earnings are down significantly for the first half of 1975 but this pattern is being reversed as the economy improves.

Clothing sales continue to be buoyant. Retailers do not have high employment levels and are not severely affected by the present high salary increases in Canada.

Car sales are down but companies specializing in replacement parts are doing well. Many motorists, apparently, are having their cars repaired rather than trading them in for newer models.

Textiles and chemicals are not performing well because of foreign competition and stock prices have reflected this pessimism. The federal government may announce some tariff protection in the budget Monday night but this would not be enough to head off declines in earnings. The outlook, however, is no worse than for many other sectors of the economy at this time.

Beverages continue to be in a slump because of higher costs and a slow consumption growth rate. The breweries have been diversifying their holdings to weather the down period. The outlook for soft drinks is improved because the price of sugar is once again under control but the market is not yet vigorous.

Business forms are beginning to feel the delayed effects of the recession and companies specializing in this field can be expected to have reduced earnings power this year. Moore Corp., for example, had been increasing earnings by 11 per cent annually but this year may only go up five per cent.

Advertising has been holding up well, which has assisted companies that hire few employees. In general, the electronic media have shown improved earnings while those in the print industry, with large numbers of employees, are feeling cost pressures.

Transportation and utility companies are feeling the effects of the economic slowdown.

In most cases, they must endure delays before they can increase rates to meet higher costs of materials and labor.

One of the few bright spots among stocks are the banks and trusts, which are benefitting from this spring's drop in interest rates. The financial institutions are caught in a price squeeze as rates go up but gain when rates decline.

Despite the recession, the per share earnings of Canadian banks should rise about 15 per cent this year with some trust and loan companies showing spectacular profit increases of 30 per cent to 50 per cent or more.

In some cases, these high percentage gains will be a recovery from unusually low earnings in 1974.

Real estate investment trusts also are in improved condition although the real estate market itself has not shown a definite trend. Any drop in mortgage interest rates has the effect of drying up the supply of mortgage funds because of the high demand for housing.

Some incentives to the real estate industry may come from the budget Monday.

Wax Firm To Change Spray Gas

NEW YORK (AP) — S. C. Johnson and Son, Inc., makers of Johnson wax and other household products in the United States, says it will stop immediately the use of fluorocarbons in its aerosol products.

The company said it was influenced by recent scientific concern that fluorocarbons may damage the earth's ozone atmosphere which shields the earth from potentially dangerous ultraviolet radiation.

Fluorocarbons, chemicals which transform a liquid into a fine spray and propel it from an aerosol can, are used in only five per cent of Johnson's products.

Johnson said it will use less expensive propellants such as hydrocarbons and carbon dioxide in its aerosols.

The company said it produces about 200 million aerosol cans a year containing about 25 different products.

Samuel Johnson, the company's chairman, said at a news conference the scientific evidence linking fluorocarbons with atmospheric damage is a "totally unforeseen concern" and "conclusive evidence is not yet available at this time." He said the company has been phasing out its fluorocarbon products over the last 15 years.

Johnson said the main reason for the change was cost.

Starting small and working up from there . . . that's the goal of John Chisholm, organizing a model railroad club in NEWTON GARDENS.

Chisholm said there has been one meeting to plan the club's operation and it is expected the group will build a small layout, and, if the interest is there, a larger one will be considered.

Chisholm runs the arts and crafts program two days a week and the future railroaders will meet Friday afternoons.

To stimulate interest in the idea there is a "name the railroad contest" and entries must be in by early next week.

The first one will be built on a 4 by 8 sheet of plywood and one that Chisholm has built in the past. The club will be limited to 20 and, at the beginning, will be for those 10 years of age and up.

SECOND SECTION

Mr. Hartley, Meet Mr. Dennis Cocke

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

For a little while this week one arm of the provincial government reached out and snatched some downtown land from another arm of the same government.

It was bought for hospital expansion almost three years ago from the Sisters of St. Ann after interminable quarrels which involved the hospital, the city of Victoria, the regional hospital board and the provincial government of the day.

In a compromise deal, the province and regional hospital board bought the land for close to $1 million, the province held title and the land was then leased back to the hospital.

The government changed, hospital planning remained bogged down and the years slipped past.

Last Friday the hospital received a letter from the provincial public works department: The message: your lease on this land ends in one year.

What plans did the provincial government have for the land then? None at all at the moment, said Public Works Minister Bill Hartley. It was just a case of consolidating the two pieces of property.

But what about the agreement of three years ago that this land was for hospital expansion?

Well, said Hartley, that was before the recent regional hospital roles policy which dictates that Victoria General won't expand, will in fact be scaled down.

That's when the behind-the-scenes discussions began. Because while Victoria General may not grow, one possibility is it will be rebuilt on the land in question. There has also been talk of building an extended care hospital on that land.

It seems certain that Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Hartley had a talk about it.

The word today is that the public works department will rescind the letter cancelling Victoria General's lease on the land.

Meanwhile local hospital officials aren't talking about it. They say they have to live with the provincial government, even when one arm of it isn't always sure what another arm is up to.

A Much Maligned Public —Our Only Guarantee

Some notes here the other day to explain why I no longer listen to hot-line programs have resulted in a letter from one of our constituents who says, "Just as I thought! Your cynicism about public opinion, notably in your diatribe against capital punishment, is now confirmed. Obviously you are against the hot-liners because they give the public its say."

This hardly rates a reply since I went to considerable pains to explain that I don't think such shows are at all representative of the real public and that those who phone in are very often motivated more by hatred than reason.

Fact is, I happen to believe that "the public" is probably the best guarantee, perhaps the only one, that what we know as the democratic system will survive. When you consider what the manipulators try to do with this amorphous mass, the calculated and computerized pressures and pandering that seem deliberately contrived to create a malleable, imbecile public, it's a marvel and a miracle that it remains a real hope for freedom and progress.

It comes down to this: I have a great, abiding faith in the intelligence and sensibility of The General Public and almost none whatever in those who must directly shape and influence it.

Any wise or reasonable step forward that's brought about at the public's instigation or with its approval — and, incredibly enough, they far out-number the reversals — is achieved in spite of a gigantic conspiracy to reduce the average man to infantilism.

If he isn't being scared to death with scorn and threats he's being tickled under the chin with cries of "kitchy-koo, kitchy-koo." The wonder of it is that he should ever have a mind or a will of his own.

Consider some of the awful pressures on this Average Man to bend him into the image that will best serve those who feed upon him.

The politicians, with rare exceptions, treat him as if truth or honesty were forms of poison that might kill him outright and have devised a whole language of dougle-talk, evasion and fraudulent promises that would shame any self-respecting con artist.

The business man saddles him with products of virtually instant obsolesence, interest rates beyond Shylock's wildest dreams of avarice and a code of ethics loose enough to ensnare any trusting soul.

The advertising man brainwashes him with phoney symbols of status and plays upon every fear from unrequited love to terminal sickness, exploiting the gamut of human weaknesses from pride to greed.

The church man does his best to terrorize him with righteous witchcraft and genteel voodoo to degrade every natural function in the name of original sin and convince him that the way to a happier next world is to be miserable in this one.

The newspaper man treats him condescendingly, apparently convinced that he has the I.Q. of a backward 11-year-old, and, in the name of "giving him what he wants," accepts a formula which puts the coverage of a professional sports team on a par with historic, global decisions, stunning him daily with trivia.

The television man assails him hour upon hour with a smorgasbord alternating between treacle and savagery, larded with commercials that further demonstrate an absolute conempt for his sensitivity.

From all sides, in short, he's beleaguered by, massive forces that seem bent on destroying his every hope of happiness, security, knowledge, good taste, maturity and individualism.

Because of these forces constantly and cold-bloodedly at work we've created the myth that The General Public is, in fact, bird-brained in judgment, shallow in tastes and bone-lazy in accepting the basic responsibilities of citizenship.

Yet two hard facts refute this.

The first is the obvious fact that the public is the victim of created appetite sold and popularized by such a complex of the machinery of mass communication techniques as to be almost unavoidable. Even so, public insistence eventually forces them to improve.

The second is the more positive fact that human progress under the democratic system somehow continues, painful and delayed as it may often appear. This is almost always the doing of the despised Average man who emerges from time to time out of his condition of enforced sloth and euphoria to make the decisions that carry us another inch forward.

How far forward we might go, and how quickly if manipulators treated him with genuine respect, is beyond imagination. But that, too, The General Public will, one day, achieve.

FUNNY, I could have sworn I saw that curb being laid just the other day . . . Provincial civil servant Bonnie Johnson wasn't the only puzzled pedestrian on Government Street Wednesday, when a bulldozer ripped up about 50 feet of newly-installed curbing. Explanation? "The work just wasn't up to the standard we wanted so we told them (Capital City Construction Co.) to take it out and start again," said a City Hall spokesman.

Bastion 'Suffering' From Construction Din

C. M. Chambers, a restaurant proprietor and chairman of the newly-formed Bastion Square Merchants Association, said the buusinessmen have sent letters to the provincial government and Victoria city council, complaining about the bad timing and lack of co-operation in scheduling construction projects.

He said they don't dispute the fact that underground utilities, street beautification, renovations to old buildings and other works are necessary. But such tasks shouldn't be tackled during the peak tourist season.

"People walk up Government, hear the jack-hammers and compressors at the entrance to the square, come up against the big holes in the way, and walk on by," Chambers said.

It's no uncommon experience to see streets dug up, resurfaced and within a few weeks dug up again, he claimed. And the city administration itself must be held "ultimately responsible" for this lack of co-ordination.

Meanwhile, Robert McHaffie, immediate past-president of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said today he has heard that several Government Street merchants are experiencing a drastic drop in trade due to construction on the mall development.

"In some cases it's in the thousands of dollars per day," he said.

Haney Man Accused In Stabbing

A 17-year-old youth is in poor condition in Victoria General Hospital today after being stabbed in the stomach in a ruckus at the Wilson Motor Inn, 850 Blanshard, early this morning.

Frank Ross Oglivie of the Victoria area, a bus boy employed at the Inn, received the wound when he and two other employees were involved in a fight with three youths in the Inn's lower level carpark.

Glen Scott Kelly, 19, of Haney appeared in Victoria provincial court charged with wounding with intent. He was remanded in custody to Friday for bail application. No plea was entered.

Victoria police said the employees had just finished their shift at 2 a.m. and were preparing to go home when an argument developed in the lobby.

Words were exchanged as the six walked to the carpark where Ogilvie was stabbed once in the stomach with the blade of a small pocket knife.

Ex-Officer Award Director

A Victoria retired naval officer has been appointed full-time provincial director of the Duke of Edinburgh's Award in Canada.

Peter Chance, 2019 Saltair Place, was formerly executive officer to the dean of law at Osgoode Law School in Toronto.

The award is a symbol of achievement in service, expeditions, hobbies, and physical fitness for young people aged 14 to 21.

No Saving Pensioner —Young

Donald Beaton Smith would have died in the June 10 fire at Esquimalt Lions' Lodge even if the municipality had three separate fire departments, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young saild today.

Young was commenting on a decision by the Victoria Labor Council to write the Esquimalt mayor urging separation of the municipality's joint police and fire department.

Labor council secretary Larry Ryan said Wednesday the move would be a practical step.

"If the municipality had a first class fire service, a life might have been saved," Ryan told delegates attending a regular council meeting.

"It's always the case that the people who don't live here and don't pay our taxes have all the answers," said Young.

"I'm absolutely convinced that if we'd had three separate fire departments (at that fire) the life would still have been lost," he said.

"As a resident who lives here and is concerned for the safety of my family, I'm completely satisfied with our police and fire service."

Esquimalt's police and fire departments are a combined force of 33 men.

Ryan said the request to Esquimalt was not to be construed a departure from the labor council's pro-amalgamation stand for fire and police services in the Victoria area.

Meanwhile, Esquimalt's fire committee chairman says the municipality will have to hire more firefighters to handle a new piece of firefighting equipment arriving this year.

"It's the best piece of equipment on the market now," said Ald. Art Mebs. "But there's no sense getting a $140,000 piece of apparatus and not having the manpower (to operate it)."

He referred to the large, versatile "snorkel" recently purchased by Esquimalt.

The unit will have an elevator platform mounted on a boom that will stretch 80 feet high for fighting fires in the municipality's taller buildings.

Mebs' suggestion that more men be hired has not yet been considered by council.

No hiring has been done in the combined police-fire force for more than a year, Chief Art Burton said Wednesday.

Boat Dwellers Escape Ban

Ten boat dwellers in Sidney's Van Isle Marina have so far escaped the municipal crackdown that hit live-aboards at Fishermen's Wharf this spring.

And Van Isle manager Alan Dickinson said today he considers his live-aboards an asset, not a liability.

About 15 people living on boats at Fishermen's Wharf, which is a federal facility administered by the municipality, were ordered to leave in early April.

The boat dwellers were told they were breaking federal regulations prohibiting dumping of garbage or wastes into the water, as well as a Sidney bylaw saying boats must be connected to a sewage disposal system.

Dickinson admitted that the boat dwellers at Van Isle don't have a sewage hookup and probably empty their wastes into the water, but he denied they caused any pollution problem.

One gallon of gasoline would do far more pollution damage than these boats, he said.

Dickinson's claim was supported by a spokesman for Northwest Biological Laboratories, which has a boathouse in the marina.

Dick Stratton said Northwest has holding tanks at the marina in which it grows sea urchins, starfish, sea lettuce and other sea life.

These have been thriving for months, he said, and they would have perished long ago if there were any pollution.

Dickinson said the live-aboards help to reduce vandalism and thefts at the marina because they are there overnight.

Sidney municipal clerk Geoff Logan said the municipal bylaw regulating boat dwellers' sewage disposal is difficult to enforce.

Three years ago, he said, an investigation into Van Isle boat dwellers was conducted after some citizens complained, but the live-aboards all denied they lived permanently on the boats.

In order to prove they did, the municipality would have to hire someone to watch the marina day and night for several days, he said.

Since that time there have been no other complaints, said Logan.

The municipality has generally left it up to marina owners to watch out for problems, he said.

$5,000 DAMAGE IN CITY BLAZE

Fire broke out in a rooming house at 1255 Pandora this morning gutting one room and causing extensive smoke damage throughout the two-storey building.

The fire was reported by a passerby who saw smoke billowing out of a ground-floor window shortly after 11 a.m.

There was no one in the building at the time and Victoria firemen had the fire out within half an hour.

Mobile History Readied

Now perched in the Vic West E and N Roundhouse, the turn-of-the-century steel coaches are almost ready for their coats of traditional tuscan red paint.

They will be shipped to Vancouver by the Provincial Museum next week to join eight rail cars already refurbished there.

The assembled train — 600 feet long — will travel B.C. with human and natural history artifacts from the museum. It will be the province's first mobile museum of its size, museum modern history curator Dan Gallacher said.

Official opening of the museum train will be July 1 at Burnaby's Central Park, and its first Vancouver Island appearance will be in Nanaimo in the first week of August.

Main engine on the train will be the old CPR 3716 built in 1912.

Ward's Antics Get Irish Up

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

Ward Sanderson showed up at Memorial Arena Wednesday and it was too bad for the 1,207 Western Lacrosse Association fans there that he did.

The rugged Sanderson, who has proven this season he can score goals as well as fight, ruined whatever chance the fans had of watching an entertaining game between his Vancouver Burrards and the Victoria Shamrocks.

Despite scoring one goal in his club's 19-10 loss to the Irish, he spent most of the evening doing anything, he could to cause a commotion.

And in that department he succeeded admirably.

He got worse in the second period. He instigated a fight with Shamrocks' Bob Turkington and took three unnecessary runs at Victoria goalie Skip Chapman.

Those were just warmups for the third period, however, when he jumped Victoria's Jim Browne from behind to precipitate a 10-minute brawl that earned 47 penalty minutes, including a major and game misconduct to Chapman for going after Sanderson.

The two clubs finished the game with 138 minutes in penalties, 28 of those to Sanderson.

WLA assistant commissioner Roy Burton was at the contest and said after that severe action would be taken against players involved in the brawls.

Burton, who will decide the punishment, will announce the penalties tonight at 8 after a meeting with commissioner Colin Cruickshank and assistant commissioner Bob Cole.

Despite Sanderson's antagonistic behavior, the Shamrocks spent most of Wednesday night playing solid lacrosse.

They led 6-1 after the first 10 minutes and were ahead 9-4 after the first period. They extended their lead to 14-8 after the middle period.

The victory was the Shamrocks' fourth straight and kept them undefeated in five home appearances. The Irish are now two points behind second-place New Westminster Salmonbellies, whom they meet tonight in New Westminster.

Ranjit Dillon paced Victoria with five goals and two assists with Jim Browne adding four goals and two assists. Ron MacNeil, with a superb two-way effort, had three goals and five assists while rookie Mike Walsh also scored three times.

Other Shamrock marksmen were Jeevan Dillon, with two, and Dennis and Tom Somner.

Veteran Gord Frederickson led the first-place Burrards with three goals. Brian Campbell had two with Bill Rawson, Bob Holmes, Bob Salt, Ron Pinder and Sanderson adding singles.

Chapman and George Grover combined for 29 saves in the Victoria nets while Vancouver netminders Don Hamilton and Pat Safianuk blocked 37 drives.

Racing: Gambling And Sex Do So Mix

With horse racing returning to Sandown Park near Sidney this fall, perhaps a few of the non-advertised facts of life about the sport of kings should be spelled out for the non-believers.

For instance, did you know that gamblers, and naturally that includes the horsey set, probably make the best lovers?

Don't take this agent's word for it. Rather listen to what Dr. Paul Brown of New York has to say on the subject, for it is his contention that a gambler is more passionate, understanding and more uninhibited as a lover.

"The main similarity," he says, "between sex and gambling is that both are fun." Besides, "they are equally popular with the poor and the rich, and in good times and bad."

How about that? Do you want more?

Well, it also seems that both activities generally occur during leisure time, are chosen voluntarily by the participants, are exhilirating, arouse positive and negative emotions, involve muscular tension and release, are releases from reality, and finally, "winning is of the utmost importance to both."

So there! Or as the fine print might say: "These observations are carried here solely for the information of Times readers and in no way are to be construed as an invitation to gamble or . . . er . . . make love."

Then, as recently printed in Track Talk, the official bible of the National Association of Canadian Race Tracks, is the decree that Edmonton, and not Toronto, is indeed Canada's capital of horse racing. And I didn't know that. But apparently it is true.

Although Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver can boast of larger attendances and heftier mutuel handles, on a per-capita basis no city can touch Edmonton or, in point, the recently-completed thoroughbred meeting at Northlands.

Each day at Northlands, an average of $1 for every man, woman and child in Edmonton passed through the mutuels. The daily average was $455,184, and if that kind of business was sustained in Toronto the daily average would be about $2.5 million and in New York, a total of $9 million dayly would to through the tote.

There are always stories too about zany happenings around the country. No doubt you've heard about the fellow who bought the wrong ticket and won big when the longshot romped home. Well, here's one with a different twist. It seems there was a chap in Winnipeg who wandered up to the daily double windows and bought 100 tickets on the opening day double at Assiniboia this year. As he handed over his $200, he was sent into a mild attack of shock with the revelation he was at the $5 window. However, as the tickets had been punched, he assured the track general manager he would make up the difference.

And that proved easy enough to do, especially as his key horse won the first race and he ended up with double tickets worth $3,860, less the $300, he owed to track manager Jim Wright.

Speaking of money, it may have escaped attention but sometimes the racing fan does strike it rich. Take the case of the bettor at Hollywood Park this spring. Ross K. O'Leno picked an 82-1 shot and a 33-1 hope in an Exacta race and when they romped home 1-2 he was the recipient of an all-time Hollywood Park payoff. He earned $13,672 for a $5 ticket, but that isn't all. He had a $20 ticket and his take-home pay before taxes was $54,688. Yes, if you win big at a U.S. track, the T-men are right there waiting for their share.

Meanwhile, George Harknett of the Capital City Turf Club was caught on the Tely the other night as predicting a $300,000 handle for Sandown, first on Saturdays and then hopefully, in a year or two, as a daily average. Or what a difference a few years make. It was only such a short time ago as 1972 that the daily average at Ex-Park was $300,000. Now, the projected figure for this season is $750,000. With an expanded plant next year, observers feel $900-$950,000 is possible, with the magic million mark likely by 1977.

And it is these fancy figures which are the basis for Harknett's optimism, with improved and expanded wagering facilities, naturally.

Then there's the story of the aspiring youngster who went before the racing stewards to take his test for a racing licence. "What," asked the chief steward, "is a good time for a three-furlong workout?"

Beaming, the youngster replied: "About 7:30 in the morning."

BALLET-LIKE leap by third baseman Karen Evans (right) of Seaboard was artistic but not technical success. Angie MacDonald (left) of Ingraham won race to bag in Senior Women's Softball League game at Hyacinth Park on Wednesday. Three hits by MacDonald also helped as Ingraham won game 10-2.

Ingraham Crew Strikes Early To Close In on Pacesetters

Bo bButterworth led Ingraham batters with a double and a home run in three trips to the plate to score twice and drive in two runs.

The homer, a leadoff blast in the third inning, provided the winning margin for Ingraham as the team moved to within two points of first-place board Construction 10-2 and Royal Oak.

Mel Nelson picked up the pitching victory scattering seven hits while striking out eight. Nelson pitched his way out of trouble after yielding a two-out, three-run homer by Jerry Lister in the sixth inning.

In the Victoria Senior Women's League, Ingraham Hotel trounced last-place Seaboard Construction 10-2 and MacDonalds Furniture blanked Esquimalt Combos 4-0 at Hyacinth Park.

Golf Glee Shows

Glen Meadows golf professional Dick Silverberg describes Diane Desnoyer as one "who enjoys her golf."

The enjoyment was never more evident than on Wednesday when the 24-year-old Glen Meadows member scored the first major upset in the Victoria district women's golf championship.

Miss Desnoyer defeated Uplands' Diane Phillips 5 and 4 to advance into today's semi-finals along with Eileen Anderson of Colwood, Dorothy DeGirolamo and Shirley Naysmith, both of Gorge Vale.

Mrs. Anderson, twice a finalist, posted a 3 and 1 victory over Gorge Vale's Gerf Pumfrey. Mrs. Naysmith, a five-time champion, defeated Ruby Niemeyer of Glen Meadows, two up, and Mrs. DeGirolamo beat Gorge clubmate Juanita Turner, 5 and 4.

The former winners were matched in one semi-final today while Miss Desnoyer faced Mrs. Anderson in the other battle.

A lab technician who plays to a 15 handicap, Miss Desnoyer "has been working hard on her game," said Silverberg. She took an early lead and maintained it while Miss Philips suffered through a below-form performance.

Miss Phillips scored an 85 to tie Mrs. DeGirolamo for medal honors in the qualifying round.

FOOTBALL ALL-STARS THROWN FOR A LOSS

Times News Service

The Canadian Football League's all-star game scheduled for Montreal Autostade next Tuesday has been cancelled.

The all-star team was scheduled to play Montreal Alouettes, the 1974 Grey Cup champions.

Gerry Petrie, executive director of the CFL Players' Association, said Wednesday the main reasons for cancellation were poor ticket sales and an apparent lack of interest.

There were reports that only 2,000 tickets had been sold for in the advance sale.

It was learned the Players Association could have lost close to $40,000 if the game had gone on. The association wanted originally to stage the game in Edmonton, but the league turned down the bid.

In 1971, about 8,000 fans turned out for the all-star game in Montreal.

"The risk is just unbelievable," Petrie said. "We wanted the game played in Edmonton and we were told we would have to play it in Montreal."

Kiwis and Puck Stars on Bates' Slate

Insofar as home dates are concerned, June can hardly be described as the busting month for Victoria Bates, but New Zealand's national team is on its way to help fill in the void.

Third-place finisher in the 1972 world men's fastball championships at Manila, New Zealand will face the Victoria team in a double-header at Royal Athletic Park next Monday.

Bates, the Pacific Coast League leaders, played their last home game on June 1 and aren't scheduled to resume league action at home until the June 28-29 weekend.

Hosts for the 1976 world tournament, the New Zealanders have embarked on an extensive tour of the U.S. and Canada. However, Victoria and Vancouver are the only cities the Kiwis will visit in Western Canada.

The New Zealand team recently defeated Canadian champion Oshawa Tony's twice in a three-game series.

Bates will face the New Zealanders without the services of their speediest outfielder. Alton Krantz, a diminutive newcomer from Prince George, has returned to his home after it was discovered he has a hairline ankle fracture.

"We're keeping a spot on the roster for him," team manager Jack Bell said Wednesday, "but it looks like he'll be out for a minimum of six weeks. It's possible he'll be ready just before the B.C. finals."

Bates still have four outfielders — Harvey Stevenson, Mike Taaffe, Reg Underwood and Ken Bate — on their 14-man roster. In addition, Bates expect lefthanded pitcher Clay Allinotte to rejoin the team before the end of the month.

The return of Allinotte, presently winding up teaching chores in Ontario, is one reason the Victoria squad released 17-year-old Larry Cole earlier this week.

With Allinotte scheduled to share mound duties with Stan Kern and Dave Ruthowsky, Bates' coach, Joe Patterson, felt Cole "wouldn't get enough regular work." Cole has been signed by Royal Oak in the Stuffy McGinnis League.

Bates have curtailed their tournament schedule, but will play in a 16-team international tournament at Hull, Que., June 30-July 7. The event has attracted the national teams of Japan and, tentatively, Mexico, as well as three-top ranked U.S. squads.

Bell also said that Bates have scheduled another exhibition in Royal Athletic Park on July 14. On that day, Bates will play a collection of National Hockey League players scheduled to instruct at the Team Canada summer hockey school at Mill Bay.

Champions Start Play In Times Tournament

THE TENNIS SCENE

By Max Low

Defending champion in three of the four events swing into action for the first time this weekend when the second round of the Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament gets under way.

Gordon Liebscher, last year's winner of the men's singles title, meets Rolf Roderer and Tom Dumancic, who was runner-up to Liebscher in the final, takes on Dennis Magee. Roderer and Magee both won their first-round matches while Liebscher and Dumancic had byes.

Greg Booth, who reached the semi-finals in a field of 89 in the men's event last year before going out to Liebscher, is defending champion in the under-18 boys' singles and also playing in the men's singles again.

Booth plays Michael McClimon in defence of his boys' title and in the men's event meets David Morgan, who scored a convincing first-round victory.

Attractive Linda Weech is the third defending champion. Linda won the girls' under-18 singles and tackles Liz Albucz in the second round of this year's event. Miss Weech is also playing in the women's singles where she takes on Margaret Dukowski in the second round. Wendy La Fave, runner-up to Linda in last year's girls' final, meets Darynn Fedoruk in second-round play.

The women's event is the only one not involving a defending champion. Last year's winner, Liz-Anne Ogden, did not enter this year and runner-up Jo-Anne Stone has joined a club and is not eligible to play.

The summer-long tournament, which is expected to wind up early in September, is limited to those who play only on public courts.

Cards have been sent out to one player of each pairing. The player receiving the card is to contact his or her opponent and arrange a mutually-suitable public parks court to play on. The result must be entered on the card, together with the winner's name, and the card returned to the Times by Friday, Aug. 4. The draw will then be made for the third round.

Crawford and teammates Sid Thompson and Ambie Mallett took a 7-6 decision over Bryon Lund's Victoria rink, a 10-4 win over John Wise of Oak Bay and a 9-7 extra-end triumph over Art Wise's Lake Hill rink to take the title.

RANGERS GET A GOALIE FROM ST. LOUIS

By The Canadian Press

The trade market, quiet during the first two days of the National Hockey League meetings in Montreal, staged a minor flurry of activity Wednesday, with the major deal involving New York Rangers and St. Louis Blues.

The Rangers acquired goaltender John Davidson, 22, who has shown great potential in his two years with the Blues, and veteran right winger Billy Collins, for left wingers Ted Irving and Bert Wilson and right winger Jerry Butler.

The deal was reported to be predicated on the Blues' acquisition of young goalie Gilles Gratton, released from his contract with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association, who appeared on the verge of signing with St. Louis. The Blues also announced the signing of their top draft choice, goalie Ed Staniowski, making Davidson available.

Staniowski was a member of Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Meanwhile, Clarence Campbell, who received the unanimous support of the governors to continue his mandate as president for another year, said the owners have decided to do everything possible to stave off demise of the financially plagues Pittsburgh Penguins, "short of buying them ourselves."

However, Campbell was more optimistic on the subject of the Seals. He said the league was making "fine progress" toward the sale of the league-operated Seals to a group headed by San Francisco businessman Mel Swig.

The Penguins filed for bankruptcy last week and show debts of $6.5 million. However, under a U.S federal court agreement, none of the team's assets will be sold.

Campbell said the league would prefer to try to save the franchise by finding a new purchaser.

Campbell said that for scheduling purposes the league must know on or about Aug. 1 what the disposition of the Penguins will be.

Aussies to Meet West Indies XI

LONDON (Reuter) — Australia and West Indies will meet in the inaugural World Cricket Cup final on Saturday.

In Wednesday's semi-finals, West Indies beat New Zealand by five wickets while Australia lost six wickets overtaking the English total of 94.

England captain Mike Denness said the games should have been played on a different pitch from the one used 10 days ago for the match between Australia and Pakistan.

His Australian counterpart, Ian Chappell, agreed the bounce was variable throughout, the main reason for eight successful appeals.

Practice Pays Off for Boston Rookie

By The Associated Press

Fred Lynn had a 20-game hitting streak stopped Monday, so the Boston Red Sox rookie centre fielder decided to do something about it.

"I came to the ballpark early for extra batting practice," Lynn said Wednesday night after leading Boston to a 15-1 win over Detroit Tigers. "I wasn't satisfied with the way I'd been swinging."

He was satisfied after Wednesday's game.

"I'm kind of glad we've got a day off tomorrow," he said. "I'll have a day off to savor this."

He hit three home runs, a triple and a single, driving in 10 runs and missing the American League RBI record by one, a mark set by Tony Lazzeri of New York Yankees in 1936. The major-league record is 12, set by James Bottomley of St. Louis Cardinals in 1924.

In other American League games, Baltimore Orioles beat Cleveland Indians 13-6, Kansas City Royals defeated California Angels 13-0, Texas Rangers beat Chicago White Sox 10-3, Milwaukee Brewers edged New York Yankees 5-3 and Oakland A's nipped Minnesota Twins 7-6.

In the National League, Cincinnati Reds pounded Atlanta Braves 6-1, Philadelphia Phillies beat Chicago Cubs 9-7, San Francisco Giants defeated San Diego Padres 8-1, Pittsburg Pirates downed St. Louis Cardinals 9-3, Montreal Expos nipped New York Mets 7-6 in 10 innings and Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Houston Astros 4-0.

Lynn moved into the league lead in runs with 42 and RBIs with 50. He increased his home run total to 14, only one behind the leaders. He is also third in batting with a .352 average and tied for fifth in doubles with 13.

Lynn began with a two-run homer in the first inning off starter Joe Coleman. He also tagged Coleman for a three-run homer in the second.

In the third, he hit a two-run triple off Bob Reynolds, beat out an infield single in the eighth off Tom Walker, then concluded the evening with a three-run homer off Walker in the ninth. His only out was a line drive to second baseman John Knox in the fifth.

English Triumph

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (AP) The England Rugby League team, playing in wet, wintry conditions, defeated North Island Country 42-4 in an exhibition match Wednesday. Keith Fielding and Les Dyl led England's attack with three tries each.

Pacific Tourney Starts Saturday

Glen Bradshaw of Victoria is the only male player selected for seeding in the four-day Pacific Regional junior tennis tournament that starts Saturday at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

After considering about 90 entries in the three age classes for boys, tournament officials placed Bradshaw on top of the under-18 list and left the other sections without a top-rated contestant.

They were more definite in the girls' categories, in which seedings are dominated by Victoria players. Brenda Cameron is rated first in the under-18 class, Wendy Barlow is No 1 in the under-16 section and Andria Levy is ranked first among under-14 competitors.

Registration will take place Friday at the Racquet Club, at 7 p.m. for local players and at 7:30 for visiting contestants.

All tournament players must also report to the Racquet Club Saturday at 8:30 a.m. to learn when and where they will play.

Former 'Rocks Spark Boston

Three former Victoria Shamrock players helped Boston Bolts trip Long Island Tomahawks 19-12 in a National Lacrosse League game Wednesday at Uniondale, N.Y.

Ivan Thompson, ex-captain of the Irish, scored four goals and set up five others while Brian Thompson fired four goals and Chris Hall added three.

In another game, former New Westminster ace Ed Goss scored three goals to spark Maryland Arrows to a 17-15 decision over Quebec Caribous.

Jobless Not Pressured To Take Unwanted Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Robert Andras told a Senate committee examining federal manpower policy Wednesday that the government will not force workers to accept jobs they do not want.

Andras said it is the duty of employers and industry to ensure that jobs are attractive in terms of pay and working condition.

"I don't think that in this country we will be successful in forcing workers to take jobs they don't want," he said.

"Nonetheless, we must make certain that workers do not refuse reasonable jobs at the expense of the unemployment insurance fund or any other public assistance."

Replying to conplaints to the committee by some employer organizations that Canada Manpower Centres are inefficient and refer poor-quality employees, Andras said the government employment service has to deal with the needs of job-seekers, not employers.

Andras said there have been some references in recent presentations to the committee that Canada Manpower Centres should put pressure on job-seekers to accept unattractive jobs.

"I must reaffirm that workers will not be forced to accept jobs that they do not want," he said in a written statement to the committee.

He noted that employers must compete for good workers with other employers in the same market.

Employers must show they are good corporate citizens and hire disadvantaged persons.

OIL PRICE RULING WILL BEAT BUDGET

OTTAWA (CP) — A decision on domestic crude oil price increases will be made before the federal budget is brought down Monday night, Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday.

He has "gone through one round" of telephone talks with the provincial premiers and now has to "get back to some of them" for further negotiations, he said.

But, "we will have to know what the decision will be before Monday."

However, the new prices are unlikely to be made public before Monday night's budget. The Alberta government has said it will not give final approval to any deal on prices before it sees the budget speech.

Jelinek Queries Coins

OTTAWA (CP) — Organizers of the 1976 Olympic Games should be forced to publish financial accounts before Parliament authorizes a fund-raising gold coin, Otto Jelinek (PC—Toronto High Park-Hymber Valley) said Wednesday.

But the government, which wants the authorizing legislation passed within a month, told the Commons it does not want to interfere with the organizers.

"It's not up to me to tell them how to run their show," said Jean Chretien, treasury board president and co-ordinator of various federal programs providing financial support for the Games.

Jelinek observed that the costs of staging the Games are rising and the deficit is growing, but Montreal authorities refuse to give an accounting.

He said he understands the Royal Canadian Mint already is overloaded with work and might not be able to produce the Olympic coin in time.

BURDEN TO ACCUSED . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — The government intends to change the bail law so that in some situations the accused person — not the police — will carry the burden of showing why release on bail is warranted, Justice Minister Otto Lang said Wednesday.

Questioned in the Commons for the second consecutive day about promised bail reform legislation, Lang said proposed amendments will do more than simply clarify the power of judges to grant bail.

"It is a case of increasing the likelihood of bail being refused when the public interest seems to require this to happen," Land told Perrin Beatty (PC—Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Watterloo).

"It will be proposed, in certain circumstances, to require the accused to show why he should be at large."

Buchanan to Ease Indian Accounts

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan, under stiff pressure from a 100-strong delegation from the Federation of Saskatchewan Indians, agreed Wednesday to review guidelines recently issued by his department dealing with local government on reserves and the way Indians account for government funds.

The minister's first attempts at answering criticism of the guides at a special meeting called by the Indians, were interrupted by heckling. He was forced to sit down without completing his opening remarks.

Assistant deputy minister Peter Leseaux was booed as well when he was introduced to the Indians.

And, throughout the two-hour meeting held in a university classroom, Indian spokesmen called for the prompt removal from Regina of acting regional director Jim Wright.

The Saskatchewan delegates came to Ottawa at their own expense to seek withdrawal of the guides, the removal of Mr. Wright and a single agency to administer Indian affairs in Saskatchewan.

What they got was Buchanan's agreement to meet them before July 1 to review and possibly change the guides, and also discuss department personnel.

He also agreed to have discussions on the Indian Act and the delegation's view on the single agency.

The Indians got unexpected backing from Dave Steuart, Liberal party leader in Saskatchewan who agreed that the guidelines threaten the traditional power of the chiefs and bands councils by allowing the establishment of regional authority boards.

Steuart said the Indians are sincere in their opposition to the guides and the issue was not that they wanted to avoid stricter accounting procedures.

Chief David Ahenakew said, however, that Indians want the accounting guidelines suspended for at least a year to permit consultation.

"IF YOU THINK I'M BUYING OLYMPIC COINS JUST TO SUPPORT THE 1976 OLYMPICS, YOU DON'T KNOW GORDON SINCLAIR."

"Sure, I think the Olympic Coin Program is a great way to support the Olympics and help our amateur athletes make a good showing at the '76 Games. But I'm a businessman too. Leaving sentiment aside, I want to be sure I'm getting value for money when I put dollars on the line.

I've looked into it carefully, and I'm sure I'm making a wise move when I buy these beautiful Olympic Coins. They're 92.5% pure silver (sterling silver), and most folks know precious metals are among the most valuable commodities in the world. Olympic Coins are not just commemorative medals, they're legal tender guaranteed by the Canadian Government for their full face value.

No one can predict the worth of Canadian Olympic Coins in years to come. But I've investigated the current market value of past issues of Olympic Coins and the gains have been dramatic. For instance, the Munich '72 10 D.M.—issue price $3.50—is now worth $14. An increase of 300%—and that's some increase in anybody's language.

These are some of the "good business" reasons why I'm putting money into the Olympic Coins but, as a Canadian, I'll be proud of my collection too. It will be a treasured memento of my participation in the success of the first-ever Olympic Games to be held in Canada."

Series III, "Early Canadian Sports," depicts a nostalgic glimpse of Canada's Sports Heritage.

Of the Olympic Coins to date, Series III is uniquely Canadian. Each coin captures, in precious Sterling Silver, a glimpse of Canada's sports heritage. Rowing, cycling, canoeing, and lacrosse are depicted in exquisite detail by famed Canadian artist, Ken Danby. Buy them for yourself as a souvenir of the '76 Games or as unique gifts for your family, friends or business associates.

THERE ARE 2 WAYS YOU CAN BUY THESE STERLING SILVER TREASURES

One Hour Oak Bay-Point Grey Jetfoil Crossings 'Viable'

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A one-hour jetfoil service between Oak Bay and Point Grey on the mainland could be a viable operation, Dr. C. Loren Doll, who teaches transportation courses at the University of British Columbia, said Wednesday.

He made the observation while aboard the Boeing Company's $7 million jetfoil which is being observed and tested by provincial government officials as part of a two-year program, designed to come up with a fast commuter service between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

Doll considered the Oak Bay-Point Grey route preferable to a downtown Victoria-Vancouver one because the faster one-hour service would encourage its use.

Such a route, Doll added, would have to be backed up by good cooking facilities and convenient public transportation ashore.

Oak Bay residents protested in 1969 when hovercraft service was porposed, and it was defeated mainly on the grounds it would be two noisey.

On a round trip between Victoria and Vancouver Wednesday it was clear no objections could be made against jetfoil service on these grounds.

Inside one of the two cabins that have a 280-seat capacity, the ride was quiet and smooth. Outside the jetfoil made less noise than an outboard engine.

The jetfoil throws no wash. We passed sailboats at 45 knots and they hardly rocked.

Going into Vancouver harbor at the same speed the pilot radioed one of two tugs towing a large log boom, asking it to report if there was any problem with wash from the jetfoil.

We zoomed by the two tugs, barely 100 yards away. The man on the first tug, still sipping his coffee, waved back, "No problem."

What about logs and deadheads?

We were shown pictures of logs more than two feet thick that had been sliced in two by the jetfoil with no damage to the vessel.

Is she easy to manoeuvre?

Her captain put her through figure eight routiees at 45 knots, and the ride was still smooth.

The captain announced he would make a simulated emergency stop. One of the experts aboard timed it with a stopwatch. From 45 knots to dead stop took 5½ seconds.

Government officials aren't committing themselves at this stage but after Wednesday's run — all done with a crew of three eliminating large operating costs — jetfoils are definitely on their minds.

SOUTH WAGON TRAIN 'PETERED RIGHT OUT'

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Humane Society's chief inspector, G. B. Hepworth, said Wednesday from Toronto that "the southern section of the Canadian Wagon Train is now defunct."

Hepworth said the society has had no communication from wagon master Gordon Roberts who threatened in May to consider legal action against the society for "harassment."

Robert's charges of harassment were levelled at the society's inspectors who kept watch on the condition of the horses pulling the wagons.

The manager of the Sault. St. Marie Humane Society, commenting on Hepworth's statement, agreed that the southern portion of the wagon train appears to have "petered right out."

Four other wagons and 15 people who broke from Roberts's command May 1 are still progressing along the longer but less hilly Highway 11 route.

They are expected to arrive in Longlac, 200 miles east of Thunder Bay, by Saturday.

'Silent Majority' Fears Expressed

EDMONTON (CP) — The parliamentary committee on immigration so far has failed to hear the views of the Canadian "silent majority", the president of the Liberal Party of Alberta said Wednesday.

Jack Pickett, in a personal submission to the opening session of the committee's two-day stay here, said the majority of the briefs and submissions put forward so far have come from either extreme left or right-wing organizations, or ethnic groups with an obvious interest in a less restrictive immigration policy.

"Mr. anl Mrs. John Q. Public are not coming forth," said Pickett, who maintained that the average Canadian sees continued immigration as a threat to the economic, social and political statue quo.

"The average Canadian is not a racist," Pickett said, adding that the fears of the population explosion, rising crime and racial tension are very real.

"These concerns must be voiced. In some circles I might be d3spised for them, but I believe this is the true, honest opinion of the Canadian public."

The committee and the audience for the most part greeted Pickett's remarks with polite disagreement and some measure of amusement.

"We must have read a different definition of liberalism," said Marcel Prud'homme (L—Saint-Denis).

Prud'homme said he was disappointed that a man of Pickett's position was articulating the darker side of people's views instead of promoting greater understanding.

B.C. MAY LIFT RACING BAN

The provincial government might amend the Municipal Act to allow horse racing on Sundays, Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer told the legislature Wednesday.

Lorimer said the Lower Fraser Valley Exhibition Society and asked for such a change.

He said amendments already introduced to the Municipal Act did not include changes to the section which prohibits horse-racing on Sundays.

Fishnets Seized on Reserve

PEMBERTON, B.C. (CP) — Three unmarked gillnets were seized in a raid by federal fisheries officers on nearby Mount Currie Indian Reserve.

Dick Crouter, manager of the federal fisheries branch for southern British Columbia, said the 10 officers also held one man at a roadblock during the raid to prevent him from warning other band members of the raid.

"It was an unusual move, but we had people on the water in a small boat to remove illegal nets. We didn't want any disturbance until they got back to shore," said Crouter.

The Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs decided in April to disregard government regulations on hunting and fishing and claimed unregulated fishing as an aboriginal right guaranteed by the terms of B.C.'s entry into confederation.

Crouter said in an interview the fisheries branch does not question the Indians' right to fish for food.

"It's a question of conservation," he said. "We must have controls."

Reap some benefits from all the cheques you write.

If you write ten or more cheques a month, consider a Commerce Key Account.

Because at 16¢ each, ten cheques already cost you $1.60. That's for the cheques you write, period.

But an extra 90¢ makes it a whole different story.

With a Commerce Key Account you can get a preferred rate on most consumer loans, (and that's a nice thing to remember). You can get this summer's travellers' cheques for no extra service charge.

You'll have an identification card which allows you to cash a personal cheque, up to $100, at any of our 1600 Commerce branches in Canada.

And that's not all. There is no service charge when you use 24-Hour Cash Dispensers, you'll get special cheques, money orders, domestic drafts, and a whole raft of other services.

All for a flat $2.50 a month. Or, in your case, maybe 90¢ more than you are paying now for cheques alone.

But hold on. We don't think everybody should get a Commerce Key Account. If you're not writing ten or more cheques you could be wasting your money.

And that's exactly what a Commerce Key Account doesn't want you to do.

MUSEUM TO GET MODEL

The Maritime Museum of British Columbia will receive a scale model of the British passenger liner SS Arcadia on Saturday.

The presentation will be made aboard the Princess Cruises-P and O Line's new ship Pacific Princess when she arrives at noon at Ogden Point on her maiden voyage.

Capt. J. A. P. Crichton will present the model, made by Bossett-Lowke in England, to Rear-Admiral R. J. Pickford, president of the Society of the Maritime Museum of British Columbia.

When she was built in 1954, the Arcadia was the most expensive ship ever built in Britain, costing some 500,000 pounds more than the Queen Mary. She first entered B.C. waters in December, 1959, and was a familiar sight around this coast until last September.

At that time, she was repositioned for cruising out of the Australian port of Sydney, being replaced on the west coast by three newer ships — the Sun Princess, Island Princess and Pacific Princess.

"Fill up with our non-leaded Shell Ultra. It'll pay off this summer and next!"

NOW, as the peak summer driving period begins, is a good time to start using non-leaded Shell Ultra in your car.

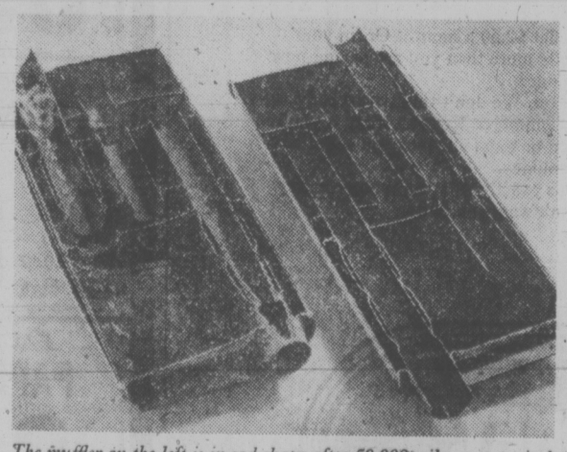
If your car is equipped with a catalytic converter, you must use non-leaded gasoline. But even if you don't have to use non-leaded gasoline in your car—maybe you should.

Shell Ultra, Canada's first non-leaded gasoline, has been the subject of extensive research at Shell's Research Centre in Oakville, Ontario. It has been used by Shell customers in Canada for over six years. It's available at most Shell stations in Metropolitan areas across Canada.

Here are some of the things we have learned about this gasoline—and why many Canadians are switching to non-leaded Shell Ultra.

Longer spark plug life. Normally you could expect a set of spark plugs to last about 12,000 miles. Time and time again in Shell research tests where cars have run exclusively on non-leaded Shell Ultra, the spark plugs have been in good condition after 25,000 miles and more.

Longer muffler life. Not just your muffler, but your entire exhaust system will be exposed to fewer corrosive gases if you use Shell Ultra regularly. Our tests have shown you can reasonably expect your exhaust system to last twice as long as it would if you use leaded gasolines.



The muffler on the left is in sad shape after 50,000 miles on a taxicab using ordinary leaded gasoline. The muffler on the right went the same distance on non-leaded Shell Ultra and is still in solid condition.

Cleaner engine parts. Even though it's not likely you'll ever actually see the difference, it's nice to know that the inside of your engine—things like pistons, rings and valves—will stay remarkably clean on non-leaded Shell Ultra.

Try a tankful of Shell Ultra before you head out on the highway this weekend. Use it consistently and you'll reap the benefits for as long as you own your car. Look for the bright blue pump at Shell stations wherever you drive in Canada.

When you fill up, ask your Shell dealer for your free copy of our informative folder on ways you can improve your gasoline mileage. Tips from the experts on how to get more for your motoring dollar—and ways your Shell dealer can help.

Make mileage your business

Ratepayers, Planners Talk Goals

"We hope to enlist the services of professional people living within our boundaries in developing a community plan," says Pat Harkness, president of the Prospect Lake Community Association.

He said the executive will act as an ad-hoc committee that "with the co-operation and co-ordination of the Saanich planning department" will see input from everyone concerned with the plan.

Last week ratepayer presidents had an informal meeting with municipal planners and discussed goals of community plans.

"It was a very positive meeting," added Harkness.

He said it is hoped there will be several open meetings at various locations so that residents can state their views.

"We must look at this community as it may be in 20 years . . . roads, facilities for the aged, schools . . . and this is why we must broaden our outlook in developing the plan," says Harkness.

Basically, the views of Harkness to the informal meeting were echoed by Barrie Goult, past-president of the Gordon Head and District Ratepayers.

"In my view it is a step in the right direction; they (Saanich planners) want our input and are willing to help us do this."

Goult said that in the past one of the problems was spot re-zoning "which is a headache for both municipal planners and ratepayers."

Some ratepayer groups have been very critical of the Capital Region Board's concept of what community plans should be.

Gordon Head is against the idea of the projected population increases as is the Highlands and Royal Oak and Northridge are opposed to light industrial zoning in their area.

"Working together we can do much more than separately," added Goult.

Mary Szalai, president o the Northridge Community Association said "it's just too bad there were only a few groups at the meeting. Somehow the message didn't reach the others."

She said the meeting got off the track a couple of times but overall it was a good one.

"Some people don't realize that the Capital Region plan is law and the only thing we have to say in is what we would like to have within the objectives of the regional plan.

"Within 20 years we will have warehouses and the population is expected to double. We must have roads — that's our first priority — schools, bus lines, apartments, recreational facilities, and in these matters we will have a say," she added.

Two Walk Away At Prison Camp

Two 17-year-olds left Jordan River forestry camp Wednesday bringing to nine the number who have walked away from the minimum security corrections centre since it opened in mid-February.

Sooke RCMP said today Clifford Lennox Coombs and Christopher Ward Ingalls were discovered missing after prison officials conducted a head count at 10:45 p.m.

Both had been in the camp only a few weeks. Ingalls had one month left to serve on a four-month sentence for theft while Coombs had about two months left on a sentence of six months definite and six months indefinite for theft over $200, a police spokesman said.

Of the nine inmates who have walked away six have been caught. Besides Coombs and Ingalls, police are still looking for Ronald Clifford Metcalfe, 18, who went missing May 19.

Coombs is described as 5 feet 6 inches tall, 126 pounds, with dark brown hair, brown eyes and fair complexion. Ingalls is the same build with red hair, blue eyes and a ruddy complexion.

Hal MacGillivray, director of the Vancouver Island regional corrections centre, said today he did not consider either of the youths dangerous. He felt their walkaway was a rash act and attributed it to their age.

"It's just one of those things. We try to place trust in people. But you know you make mistakes. We're getting to the point the only people coming to jail are the ones who have had three or four chances before."

He said if an inmate is not considered a danger to the public "there is no finer place to try to rehabilitate him than at a forestry camp."

Ferry Construction Cost $700,000 Over Estimates

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three tenders for construction of the proposed Burrard Inlet ferries quote an average price of $3.2 million a vessel, up from estimates of $2.5 million a vessel in March, 1974, the director of the bureau of transit services says.

Vic Parker said in an interview the increases are the result of escalating costs not accounted for in earlier figures.

He said Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer will announce which company has been awarded the contract by the middle of next week.

The two 400-passenger ferdies designed to travel between Vancouver and the suburban north shore in 8½ minutes with a loading and unloading time of 90 seconds, are scheduled to be ready for service next spirng.

BURNABY (CP) — Doug Jack of New Westminster, coroner in an inquest into the apparent suicide of a murder suspect, said Wednesday he did not inform the inquest jury of a letter written by the suspect because he did not think it was relevant.

The inquest was into the death of William Robert Sackville, 22, at the Lower Mainland Correctional Centre (Oakalla).

The letter in question, which RCMP have not made public, has been quoted by the Vancouver Province as saying: "You could call this some kind of suicide letter if you want. It doesn't bother me, in fact nothing will bother me any more if I can help it."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police say a man armed with a sawed-off shotgun robbed a liquor store Tuesday of about $3,700, then apparently got away on a B.C. hydro bus. A taxi driver said he saw the suspect board the bus.

TRIAL DATES SET

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Trial dates were set in provincial court Tuesday for 12 persons charged with trafficking in soft drugs or cocaine.

The 12 are among 29 persons arrested and charged as the result of an RCMP round-up which started June 12.

The action was part of a coordinated roundup of suspected traffickers in heroin, cocaine and other illegal drugs in Vancouver, North Vancouver, West Vancouver and Surrey, June 12. On that date, 221 charges were prepared against 132 suspects.

DRUG CASE SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Heather Ann McBeath, 131 Kingston, has been given a suspended sentence in county court and placed on probation for three years after being convicted earlier of possession of heroin May 16, 1974.

Court was told she is withdrawing from heroin on the methadone program and Judge E. J. C. Stewart said that with a "very favorable" pre-sentence report, it would be wrong to jail her and a fine was inappropriate.

"I hope you succeed in the program you now are undergoing," he told her.

Dues More Than Double For U.S. Doctors' Group

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (WP) — The financially troubled American Medical Association Wednesday sought to move into the black by more than doubling its annnual dues from $110 to $250 ayear.

Its new president, Dr. Max H. Parrott, said the action could cost organized medicine 13,000 to 15,000 members.

But one member of the AMA's policy making House of Delegates disagreed. Compared to the dues structures of other organizations, and particularly when related to income levels and the stakes involved, I think we've got a real bargain at $250,'" said Dr. Jack L. Gibbs of Canton, Ill.

"My coalminer brother pays more than I do to his major organization, and maybe that's why George Meany (president of the AFL-CIO) is so powerful."

The AMA has lost $8.5 million since 1970, and its cash reserves have dwindled during the past five years from $5 million to less than $200,000. At the same time its membership has been decreasing and it now represents 156,000 doctors — fewer than half of the nation's 380,000 physicians.

The dues increase, rejected by the AMA's delegates last December, was a major issue at the annual convention here.

Parrott, a Portland, Ore. obstetrician who was installed Wednesday as the new AMA president, said the money from the dues increase will be used as a "war chest" for court battles against federal laws and regulations that many doctors feel interfere with their right to practice medicine as they like.

These federal actions include the health planning bill passed by Congress and Department of Health Education and Welfare regulations that restrict payments under Medicare and Medicaid to the lowest prices drugs.

The AMA leadership gained membership support by winning a federal court injunction last month against other HEW regulations that would review doctors' decisions to hospitalize Medicare and Medicaid patients.

Child Assaulted

A 57-year-old former North Pender Island resident was found guilty in county court Wednesday of indecent assault against a six-year-old girl last October.

Sidney Marven Rasmussen will be sentenced June 27 by Judge Montague Drake after receipt of a pre-sentence report.

Judge Drake said there was a "handling of private parts" of the girl by Rasmussen.

The girl, now aged seven, told court Rasmussen was "touching me in between my legs with his hand." He didn't hurt her and she was wearing jeans all the time, she said.

The two were sitting on the steps of a house playing a harmonica at the time.

BILL AIMS AT LIES TO PUBLIC

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) said Wednesday that he will introduce legislation that would make it a crime for government officials to lie to the public.

A spokesman for Kennedy said the proposal was prompted in part by the circumstances surrounding a 1971 effort to keep the Central Intelligenee Agency's illegal mail-intercept program from coming to light.

The Federation of American Scientists was assured then, in response to a generalized inquiry, that the Post Office Department had no knowledge of efforts by any federal agency to take any mail out of regular postal channels in order "to obtain the information contained therein."

The assurance was given in writing by chief U.S. Postal Inspector William J. Cotter, a former CIA agent who was aware that the agency had been secretly opening mail to and from the Soviet Union since the early 1950s.

Pen Probe Told of Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jim Murphy, regional director of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, said Wednesday nine countries had been contacted about accepting three convicts who were holding 15 hostages at the British Columbia Penitentiary 10 days ago.

Mr. Murphy, first witness before the three-man inquiry headed by Mr. Justice John Farris of the British Columbia Appeal Court, said he had been told by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand that one country, under certain conditions, would accept the three men, each serving a life term.

That offer was not relayed to the convicts. About 3½ hours after Mr. Allmand told Mr. Murphy of the offer, the 15 hostages all prison employees attacked their knife-wielding captors.

One hostage, Mary Steinhauser, 32, a prison classification officer, was killed by a bullet fired during the rescue.

Mr. Murphy said he did not plan tell the convicts about the offer from the unnamed country until it was approved by the federal cabinet at a noon meeting in Ottawa.

He said no hostages were to be taken out of Canada.

The three convicts were Clair Wilson, 25, Dwight Douglas Lucas, 20, and Andrew Bruce, 26, the latter two serving life terms for murder and Wilson for attempted murder.

Bruce was injured by bullets when the hostages ended the siege. He is in hospital, but is out of danger.

Dragan Cernetic, director of the penitentiary, in nearby New Westminster, said Bruce, in a confrontation with Mr. Cernetic about two hours after the siege began, held a kitchen knife to the throat of Miss Steinhauser and said in a "very cynical" tone of voice:

"I hope you get the message and you know that we mean it. Either the demands are met or the bodies will be carried out."

One of the demands, said Mr. Cernetic, was "to get some Demerol and some spikes (needles)."

"They broke one bottle of Demerol and mainlined it into Mary Steinhauser and watched her to see what happened," Mr. Cernetic said.

Apparently the drug had little effect and the prisoners started swearing and casing a commotion.

"They allegedly had bottles of gasoline which they said they would light and throw at anyone who entered," said Mr. Cernetic.

In accordance one of Bruce's requests, negotiators brought in were Gary Bannerman, a radio open-line host, Vancouver Province repofter James Spears, political writer Mordecai Briemberg, and lawyers Bryan Williams and Donald Sorochan.

One of their demands was that 18 to 23 convicts in the prison's special segregation unit be released, "to which of course I said no," Mr. Cernetic said.

Death Defined

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The American Medical Association's house of delegates rejected Tuesday a proposal to define death as the cessation of total brain function.

In a vote, the delegates to the AMA's annual convention in effect reject the contention from its Tennessee delegation that "it is currently medically established that irreversible cessation of total brain function is determinative of death."

Existing AMA policy states irreversible cessation of brain function is but one of a number of criteria that can be used in the medical diagnosis of death.

Wires Crossed On Phone Birth

WASHINGTON (CP) — A protest from the Canadian embassy — which claims the telephone was invented in Canada — has sent telephone company historians diving into their files to support their contention that it was invented in Boston.

But unless someone convinces the phone company otherwise, Boston will be hailed as the birthplace on the covers of 180 million U.S. telephone directories during the coming year.

The dispute was touched off by the publication of the latest District of Columbia directory put out by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., a division of American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

One "American" hero depicted on the rear cover is Edinburgh-born Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, and that's what got the embassy's back up. The text that goes with the Bell sketch read:

"Teacher of the deaf, scientist, inventor, humanitarian, philanthropist. He changed the way the world communicated with his invention of the telephone in Boston on March 10, 1876."

The embassy fired off a note over the signature of Keith de Bellefeuille Percy, first secretary, quoting Bell himself as saying:

"It is rather a curious thing to me to see the dispute about where the telephone was invented."

And that quotation is from a speech Bell made in Ottawa 65 years ago.

It continues:

"It was I who invented the telephone and it was invented wherever I happened to be at the time.

"Of this you may be sure, the telephone was invented in Canada. It was made in the United States. The first transmission of a human voice over a telephone wire, where the speaker and the listener were miles apart, was in Canada . . .

"It certainly is the case that the telephone was invented in Canada and that the first actual use of telephone lines was in this country."

But Jim Mundis, ATT public relations man, says:

"It has been documented on our side for many years that the telephone was invented in Boston."

King Defends Swanson

Labor Minister Bill King said Wednesday the actions of B.C. Railway director R. A. Swanson do not constitute a conflict of interest.

King joined Liberal Leader David Anderson and other Independent MLAs in protesting the Social Credit charges against Swanson which they say have unfairly smeared and maligned him.

"There's no reason whatsoever the director of a Crown corporation should not be involved in a business deal with another department," said King.

"I don't think this is the kind of gratitude that should be expressed for a long-term civil servant in the province."

The Socreds, led by Don Phillips (South Peace River), charge Swanson was in "a serious conflict of interest" because two companies of which he is a director have received about $51,000 in government payments since he joined the BCR board in 1972.

Frank Richter (SC — Boundary-Similkameen) said Swanson's job with commercial transport department under the Socred government was terminated in 1971 because of "conclusive evidence" Richter found when he investigated the possibility of a conflict at that time.

(Richter was then minister of commercial transport.)

King said he does not believe Swanson has been in a conflict under the NDP and he has found no evidence in government files that Swanson was in a conflict during the many years he was chief engineer in commercial transport under the Socred government.

All indications are, said King, that Swanson was already past the age of retirment in 1971 and his employment extensions were simply discontinued when he reached the age of 67.

But Richter said his investigation of Swanson's activities were private; nothing would appear in government files; and Swanson was never told why his job was terminated.

King said Richter was telling that version to save face for Opposition Leader Bill Bennett and Phillips who had earlier said Swanson was fired because of the conflicts.

The Socreds said their government fired Swanson and the NDP should do the same.

Swanson's two companies are Railway Appliance Research Ltd. and Airchime Manufacturing Co. Ltd.

Railway Appliance received $26,520 from the government in 1972-73 and $18,187 in 193-74. Airchime received $4,235 in 1972-73 and $2,225.

Under the Socred government, Railway Appliance received $10,000 in 1965, $869 in 1969, $11,592 in 1970 and $971 in 1971.

Because the payments made since 1972 were from other government departments, not the BCR, there is no conflict, said King.

"The only payments I can determine ever made to Swanson were in connection with his duties as a board director, $700 for incidental travel expenses," he said.

Phillips charged the government was billed for $1,900 to cover payments for a BCR management study conducted by Swanson and presented on Railway Appliance stationery.

"But BCR refused to authorize it because it was considered a conflict of interest," said Phillips.

King said, however, he talked with Swanson by telephone Wednesday and "was assured that he was not paid for the report."

The minister said the government funds received by Swanson's companies during the last two years were from the travel industry department for refurbishing work on the Royal Hudson steam train.

At the end of the lengthy debate in the house, the Liberal leader asked for special leave to relate to the house a conversation he had with Swanson about the charges levelled by the Socreds.

A former civil servant has been accused falsely of being fired and maligned without an opportunity for redress, said Anderson.

But Independent MLA Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) denied leave because he said the whole issue "has gone far enough."

The legislature had become a kangaroo court, said Williams, and it is time all the innuendo and slander was stopped.

Williams agreed with Anderson and Garde Gardom (Ind.-Vancouver-Point Grey) that a judicial inquiry should be held.

Anderson said he wanted Swanson's side of the story on the record because of the charges and counter-charges across the floor of the legislature.

Bennett said he agreed the cross-fire of charges was regrettable and said he called for a judicial inquiry into the matter earlier this week.

But he said Premier Barrett had set the tone of the debate by starting off debate of the BCR legislation increasing its borrowing power by a "highly charged political atmosphere of charges and misrepresentations."

Williams and Anderson also said the inquiry should cover all aspects of the BCR since the issue has become so confused and so many accusations have been made.

BORROWING BILL FOR BCR PASSES

The provincial government's legislation to increase borrowing power of B.C. Rail to $650 million was approved in the legislature Wednesday with solid Socred support.

The legislation, given royal assent when Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen was called to the house, increases BCR borrowing power by $210 million, allowing immediate financial assistance for the railway which is out of funds.

The bill was passed by a vote of 35 to 2, with only Independents Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) and Garde Gardom (Vancouver-Point Grey) voting against.

Approval followed extensive debate on auditing practices of the former Socred administration and the current NDP government.

B.C. Government Probing 'Strange' Cash Card Plan

The consumer services department is investigating a "cash card" scheme being promoted by Bedrock Financial Services of Vancouver.

Bedrock has been soliciting people through the mail to pay $5 for a cash card to use instead of traditional credit cards.

Merchants have to pay one to six per cent to credit card firms when credit is granted, says Bedrock, and a cash card would eliminate that cost to business.

In return for paying cash, the merchant could be persuaded to split the difference, giving the customer two to three per cent off and saving the merchant another two to three per cent.

Hugh Curtis (SC-Saanich), who raised the matter in the legislature Thursday, called it "a strange promotion."

Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young said she also received a letter from Bedrock and immediately asked her department to investigate.

She said she wouldn't want to comment on the propriety of the business and she said the question of price reductions in retur nfor cash is "a two-edged sword."

On the surface it seems like a good idea, she said, but small businesses, which don't have their own credit systems, might suffer.

Scrivener Denies Interest Conflict

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former senior executive fired from the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia said in a statement Wednesday he had majority ownership of a prairie insurance adjusting firm but did not have control.

Transport Minister Bob Strachan fired Douglas Scrivener, vice-president of claims for ICBC, because of outside insurance adjusting interests in direct violation of company rules.

In a statement issued through his Vancouver lawyers, Scrivener said that when he was offered employment with ICBC in 1973 he had business interests in five prairie insurance adjustment firms, including D. A. Scrivener Co. Ltd. of Saskatchewan.

He said he sold all his shares in the companies, except D. A. Scrivener Co. Ltd.

Scrivener said the firm is a holding company to take payments for assets bought by two former employees who set up another company named D. A. Scrivener Adjusters Ltd. in which Scrivener still owns 51 per cent of the shares. He said the two employees will eventually own all the shares by 1978.

Control of the company passed to the former employees through a management contract, Scrivener said.

"I have not now and I never have had anything to do with the operations of that company. So far as I am concerned the only interest I have left in any of my businesses in Saskatchewan is in the payments I receive from time to time from D. A. Scrivener Co. Ltd. which was only a holding company in no way connected with the insurance business as all its insurance business and assets had been sold to D. A. Scrivener Adjusters Ltd."

Strachan fired Scrivener for conflict of interest. The minister said Monday outside the house that D. A Scrivener Adjusters Ltd., based in Regina, had been on the ICBC list of adjusters to recommend.

"Although Mr. Scrivener claims no conflict of interest, I cannot accept that," Strachan had told the house. "In my opinion a continuing interest in an adjusting company does not meet the standards required by ICBC as set out in a memorandum sent to all management staff in March 5, 1975."

The memorandum said no employee should directly or indirectly maintain any other outside business or finanacial interests which conflict with the interest of the corporation, Strachan said.

"It did not appear to me at any time that there is any conflict of interest in those facts, as I had no active role in any comapnies which might be doing business with the province of British Columbia or with the ICBC," Scrivener said in his statement Wednesday.

"I was aware of the memo of March 5, 1975, relating to conflict of interest, but I felt that the management agreement with Mr. Overend (manager of D. A. Scrivener Adjusters Ltd.) removed any possible conflict of interest.

"I have not suggested to anyone in ICBC that claims be referred to any adjusting firm in Saskatchewan nor have I referred any claims to any specific adjusting firm in Saskatchewan myself. I am not interested in the names of the adjusting firms who handle claims under B.C. policies in Saskatchewan so long as the claims are handled competently."

He said he made the facts known May 29 to a representative of Strachan's when asked about his interests in prairie companies. He also said at that time he "was not in control of D. A. Scrivener Adjusters Ltd. by reason of a management contract."

ALCOHOL BLAMED IN CRIME

SURREY (CP) — Alcohol is directly related to crime, anl parents who drink to excess are indirectly responsible for acts of delinquency by their children, a local group studying juvenile delinquency was told Tuesday.

Len Sawatsky, a study group member and probation officer in this municipality near Vancouver, said at least 60 per cent of crimes are related to alcohol consumption and many parents are setting a double standard.

He said that if consumption of alcohol by both adults and juveniles was eradicated, crime would be reduced by at least that figure. When delinquency or criminal offences are committed, the offender is usually intoxicated, mildly drunk, or under alcoholic fortification.

Sawatsky said he is disgusted by parents who complain about juvenile delinquency but regularly consume large quantities of alcohol and tranquilizers.

"Why shouldn't kid rebel when they see this sort of inconsistency," said Sawatsky.

He added that a number of taxi drivers in Surrey have been obtaining alcohol for juveniles.

He said that the answer to the alcohol problem is not increasing education in schools but the study group decided to ask the human resources department for funds to set up an alcohol counselling centre.

She Turned to Faces That Portray Wisdom

elizabeth forbes

Dorothy Oxborough (Mrs. H. A. Johnson), famed throughout North America for her paintings of young faces, especially of Indian children, is now concentrating her exceptional gift for portraiture on the faces of older people—and again especially of Indians.

This is quite evident if you visit her first Victoria showing of selected pastels in the Leafhill Galleries on Bastion Square, this week.

Up to the time her husband retired from the Department of Northern Affairs (in 1973) and they came to Victoria to live, this talented artist's efforts were governed mainly by the places in which she lived.

In Banff it was the children of the plains Indians that intrigued and interested her.

When Johnson was transferred to Nova Scotia she continued with children's faces and added sketches of fishermen who lived and worked out of the coves along the coast there.

Another move, to Ottawa in 1967, saw her starting to add studies of dogs to her collections.

The past two years "it's been different," she says. "Now I'm turning more and more to the faces of the old and to the wisdom and tolerance I find in those faces."

Most of her recent works have been done on velour paper "because it gives a lovely soft effect." She is also experimenting with painting on deerskin and on burlap with remarkable results.

In her present showing there's an exceptional study of Chris Paul, an elder of the Tsartlip Band in West Saanich, and the father of former Chief Philip Paul; also a delightful study of Monica Tom, of the same band.

"I didn't know either Paul or Monica Tom until recently when I was introduced to them through Mrs. Tom Sampson of the band council office, and I asked if I might paint their portraits," Dorothy Oxborough told me.

"As I sketched their faces and did the finished portraits I became increasingly aware of their patience, their courtesy and their wisdom."

Other outstanding portraits in the showing include one on deerskin of an Indian baby sound asleep in a shoulder cradle and another of a mother and baby, done on burlap.

This gifted woman was born in Calgary but moved to Banff with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Oxborough (who are now living in Victoria) at an early age.

She credits her father, a surveyor-engineer, with placing the first drawing pencil in her fingers.

"I wasn't much more than two then," she remembers. "When we visited friends or when friends visited us, he would keep me quiet by sitting me in a corner with paper and pencil and telling me to draw something."

She grew up in Banff and lived there for some time after she was married. It was there too that she found a first outlet for her paintings "quite by chance".

That was during the years of the Second World War when visitors to the mountain resort could find nothing authentically Canadian to buy as souvenirs.

"To offset that lack, my mother opened a strictly Canadian handicraft shop," she says, "and some of my 'faces' of plains Indian children were included . . . they went like hotcakes."

She still has an outlet in Banff and also in other places across Canada (including Victoria) where reproductions of her paintings are found in hasti-notes, calendars and in pictures.

You'll also see the Oxborough signature on commissioned works of children, grown-ups and of dogs, in prominent homes across Canada.

Today however, this artist prefers to keep that part of her art at a minimum. More and more she is choosing her own models and as she says, she is turning "to the faces that portray the wisdom and the understanding of the aged."

She is also concentrating on doing a second painting of recent originals which she presents to the family of the model "to be treasured in that family and preserved for their descendants."

The Johnson home is now on Alta Vista Heights, off the Keating Crossroad where "we grow all our own vegetables."

"We're also very interested in fishing and although we haven't got our own boat as yet, we are looking for one."

At the present moment however, it is her first-showing in Victoria that is holding this gifted woman's attention.

It continues Friday and Saturday at the Liefhill Galleries on Bastion Square. So, if you have a few moments to spare, do drop in there and see what Dorothy Oxborough is doing and has done in the past two years.

Of Interest—Gene Errington, now well established in Victoria as provincial Status of Women co-ordinator, is in Mexico today, as one of eight women named by Hon. Marc Lalond, federal minister responsible for Status of Women Affairs, as Canada's representatives to the United National conference for IWY that open down there today and continues until July 2.

The delegation is headed by Coline Campbell, secretary to Lalonde. Others in the group are Sylva Gelber, head of the federal Women's Bureau; Laurette Robillard, president of the Quebec Status of Women Council; Freda Paltiel, co-ordinating officer on status of women affairs in the federal government; Ethel McLellan, co-ordinating officer with the Ontario Department of Labor and Hylda Bateman, liaison officer with the Canadian-International Development League.

For Good-Eating Fun Try Camper's Kebobs

A successful camping trip doesn't begin in a cool pine forest, a secluded beach cove or a trailer park. It begins at home, preferably at a big table where you can spread out maps and information about places to camp and draw up a list of things to pack.

One of the most important checklists you'll have to make, of course, is what to take along for your outdoor kitchen. What's on that list will depend on such variables as what kind of vehicles you're using, whether you're going tenting or using a mobile home, how well the campsite you pull into is equipped or whether your moving around or staying put.

But one thing is certain. Today, no one has to be content with camping out on canned beans, spaghetti and hamburger. You can plan a balanced diet full of good eating fun. Here are two new portable food ideas that are versatile enough to adapt to most types of campsite cooking.

Camper's Kebobs combine canned luncheon meat, fresh or frozen corn-on-the-cob and chunks of sweet gherkins. The skewered food is basted and served with a tangy chili butter flavored with sweet pickle liquid. Pickles and their liquid, a staple for the camp-out kitchen, add flavor and crunch to all manner of cook-out food: salads and dressings, barbecue sauces, sandwiches, one dish skillets, and kebobs.

They combine particularly well with canned luncheon meat which also stores well and takes up very little space. As for the corn, frozen will be okay in the ice-chest or refrigerator unit if you're lucky enough to have one. But if you're camped near stores of roadside stands where you can shop for fresh food, use the fresh corn as preference.

The kebobs are done on the grill — or in the broiler if you're camping out on the backyard patio. If you're cooking your pickle sauce in a skillet over a wood fire, here's a tip. Wood fires tend to blacken the bottom of cooking pans so daubing them with soap before-hand helps to easily wipe off the charring.

Try the ham and cheese burgers as a quick and interesting sandwich variation. They help stretch your food supplies and they make use of the left-over ham you had before you left. Make up the spread in advance and keep chilled. Then everyone can help themselves to sandwiches at lunch or snack time. The spread doubles as an hors d'oeuvre when used on crackers.

CAMPER'S KEBOBS
(makes 6 servings)

¾ cup butter or margarine
1½ tsps. Chili powder
¾ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
½ cup sweet pickle liquid (drained from sweet gherkins)
2 garlic cloves, crushed
2 cans (12 oz. each) luncheon meat
6 ears fresh corn-on-the-cob, cut into quarters or 3 packages (2 ears per package) frozen corn-on-the-cob, thawed and cut into quarters
8 large sweet gherkins, halved crosswise

Melt butter in a small saucepan. Stir in chili powder, salt, pepper, pickle liquid and garlic.

Cut each piece of luncheon meat into 12 chunks. Alternate meat, corn chunks and pickle halves on 12 8-inch skewers. Place skewers on grill or on broiler rack; brush with chili-butter mixture. Grill or broil 8 to 10 minutes, about 5 inches from source of heat, turning once and basting occasionally with chili-butter mixture, until corn is fork tender. Serve hot with remaining chili-butter mixture.

HAM AND CHEESE BURGERS
(Makes 6 servings)

½ cup mayonnaise
2 tbsps. prepared mustard
¼ tsp. black pepper
½ lb. ground or very finely chopped cooked ham
¼ lbs nastural Swiss Cheese grated (about 1 cup)
2-3 cup finely chopped sweet gherkins
½ cup chopped celery
1-3 cup chopped onion
6 hamburger buns, toasted
Lettuce leaves

Blend mayonnaise, mustard and pepper in medium bowl; add all remaining ingredients except buns and lettuce; mix well. Spoon about ½ cup ham mixture on bottom half of each toasted bun. Top each with lettuce leaf and other bun half.

EVEN A CRANK LIKED THIS STEW

By MARY MOORE

The wife of a sick friend was neglecting her meals. The patient's meals were delicious but when it came time for the "nurse" to eat she lost interest.

I decided to make the best beef stew ever and take some boiling hot to her sharp at 6.

How do you feel about your beef stew? Could it stand a little picking up? Try my slightly different method. One of my critics — who is a real crank — said it was excellent. I do too.

EXCELLENT BEEF STEW
(serves 6 generously

2 lbs. stewing beef cut into bite-size pieces.
½ c. flour
¾ tsp. marjoram
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. garlic salt
¼ tsp. pepper
3 tbsp. oil
2 c. hot water
1 tbsp. soy sauce
1 tbsp. soy sauce
1 onion sliced
1½ c. cut-up (1") narrow carrots
1½ c. potatoes cut into 1¾" pieces.
1½ c. cut green beans tw
two 6" zucchini squash cut into 1" pieces.

Measure the flour, marjoram, salt, farlic salt and pepper into a medium brown paper bag. Add cut up stewing beef and shake well to coat.

Heat oil in large heavy pot (with lid) and add all meat and flour mixture and brown over medium-high heat for about 10 minutes stirring very frequently. Add hot water and soy sauce, mix in, cover, and simmer for 3 hours.

After 2 hours add the sliced onion.

Twenty minutes before mealtime cook the carrots and potatoes in a minimum of water. About 10 minutes before mealtime put the beans on to cook and add the chunks of zucchini when beans are half done. As soon as the vegetables are barely done drain and add them to the stew and stir in. The stew is now ready to serve.

NUTRITION BUYLINE

QUESTION: I have heard that skipping breakfast adversely affects intellectual performance. Is this true?

ANSWER: Skipping breakfast or any meal commonly leads to the sensation we know as hunger. Although hunger does not permanently alter brain structure it has been shown to lead to behavioral alterations in the learning situation, including listlessness, fatigue, hyperactivity or hyperirritability, so that responses to educational stimulation do not occur. If this initial stimulation does not occur, the next stage in the learning process is more difficult and hence learning ability may be impaired in this fashion.

QUESTION: I live alone, and find it difficult to shop for myself — for example, pork chops always come in packages of two to six, broccoli is in large bunches, and if I buy a loaf of bread it goes stale before I eat it. Any suggestions?

ANSWER: Even at a large supermarket you can ask the butcher to divide a package of pork chops, liver or other protein foods. You can separate packages of broccoli yourself, and buy only what you will eat. A loaf of bread may be cut in half and half frozen until you want to use it. For other suggestions you may wish to contact your local health unit for a free copy of "The Senior Chef". Although this booklet was designed for senior citizens, it gives many hints and suggestions for cooking and shopping that are applicable to anyone living alone — young or old.

QUESTION: Is magnesium deficiency very common?

ANSWER: No, since magnesium is widely distributed in foods, especially whole grain cereals, nuts, legumes, and dark leafy vegetables. Deficiency can be seen in chronic alcoholism, in severe renal disease, or in severe malnutrition.

Have you any questions you would like answered? Forward them to this newspaper or directly to the Division of Community Nutrition, Parliament Buildings, Victoria.

Annual flowers will enhance the appearance of the smallest garden! Even with poor soil, a few inexpensive packets of seed will provide gay colors outdoors and an abundance of cut flowers for indoors.

Before you decide what types of annuals to grow, study the 32-page booklet Annual Flowers for Canadian Gardens. It recommends that you buy your seed from a reliable dealer, instead of collecting it from your own plants. It also tells you how to start your seeds indoors in pots or flats. Be careful how you water these containers. Instead of watering the surface, let the water soak up from below.

You will learn how to transplant the seedlings and how to protect them against insects and disease once you have set them out.

The booklet offers pages and pages with descriptions of annuals, what they look like and how high you can expect them to grow. There is also a list of ornamental grasses with attractive spikes. You may like to dry these and add them to winter bouquets.

In addition, you will find a list of annuals grouped according to their main objective such as colorful borders, climbers, fragrance, for rock gardens or window boxes and those that will flower in partial shade.

You will no doubt want to keep this helpful guide on your reference bookshelf.

Royal Aide Dies

LONDON (Reuter) — Commander Sir Richard Colville, 67, press secretary to Queen Elizabeth from 1952 to 1968, has died at his southeast England home, it was announced Monday. Sir Richard was also press secretary from 1947 to 1952 to King George, the Queen's father.

A CHILD LEARNS TO SWIM

Using Freddie Frog as an example you've taught him to put his face under water and breathe out through his mouth and nose. Freddie, as you've told him, learned from his mother and the child knows how easily Freddie moves through the water. Your child is sure he can be as good a swimmer.

Remind your child he's seen Freddie swim under water with his eyes open. First, demonstrate you have no discomfort with your eyes open under water. To prove it, you and he can play a game.

Before putting your face into the water, close your eyes and ask the child to place a small object, unknown to you, on the bottom of the basin. Now, put your face into the water, open your eyes to identify the object, raise your head and tell the child what you saw.

Next, suggest the child do the same: He closes his eyes, you place a coin on the bottom of the basin and he tells you what is after opening his eyes under water. Let him keep ther coin as an extra allowance for the week. Repeat the game with different coins as long as you can afford it; he'll be anxious to play.

Veal: Little Goes Long Way

CRAIG CLAIRBORNE

NEW YORK — Italian cooks have known for years that while veal may be the most expensive meat on the market, it is possible to make a very few slices go an admirably long way by stuffing them.

There are as many Italian methods for stuffing veal as there are beans in a kettle of minestrone, but one of the best is offered here.

The filling is made with a base of bread crumbs and prosciutto (or other ham), parsley, nutmeg, garlic, basil and oregano.

To round out a menu there is also an excellent Italian shrimp appetizer made with oranges and anchovies.

SHRIMP, ORANGES, ANCHOVIES

24 raw shrimp in the shell
6 whole allspice
Salt
2 small onions, preferably the redskin variety
3 or 4 seedless navel oranges
8 flat anchovy fillets
½ cup sauce vinaigrette with rosemary (see recipe)
Black olives, preferably

1. Put the shrimp in a saucepan and add the allspice and salt to taste. Add cold water to barely cover and bring to the boil. Turn off the heat and let the shrimp stand until they are room temperature. Drain, shell and devein. Set aside.

2. Peel and cut the onions into quarter-inch-thick slices. Place them in a small bowl and pour boiling water over them. Stir for about 15 seconds and drain immediately. Drop them into a small bowl containing cold water and a few ice cubes. When thoroughly chilled, drain and set aside.

3. Peel the oranges and slice them. Arrange an equal number of slices on four salad plates. Arrange the shrimp on the oranges and scatter onion rings over each serving. Garnish each with two anchovy fillets. Spoon the sauce vinaigrette with rosemary over each serving and add the black olives. Serve immediately.

Yield: four servings.

SAUCE VINAIGRETTE WITH ROSEMARY

2 teaspoons imported mustard, preferably Dijon or Dusseldorf (do not use the domestic ball-park variety)
Salt and freshly ground pepper
½ teaspoon chopped garlic
4 teaspoons red wine vinegar
½ cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil
1 teaspoon chopped fresh rosemary or half the amouamount dried.

1. Place the mustard in a small mixing bowl and add salt and pepper to taste, garlic and vinegar.

2. Use a wire whisk and gradually add the oil, stirring vigorously with the whisk. Stir in the rosemary and serve.

ROLLATINI DI VITELLO AL POMODORO (Veal rolls with tomato sauce)

¼ pound prosciutto or other ham
1-3 cup fine, soft bread crumbs
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
4 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
½ teaspoon nutmeg
2 eggs
1 teaspoon dried oregano
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or ½ teaspoon dried
¼ cup heavy cream
1½ teaspoons chopped garlic. Salt and freshly ground pepper
12 thin slices of veal (scaloppine), preferably cut from the leg
1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons finely chopped onion
½ cup dry white wine
2 cups canned peeled tomatoes, preferably imported
Spaghetti or other pasta.

1. Chop the prosciutto finely. Combine it in a mixing bowl with the bread crumbs, cheese, parsley, nutmeg, eggs, oregano, basil, heavy cream, one teaspoon garlic, and salt and pepper to taste. Blend well.

2. Pound the pieces of veal lightly without breaking the meat. Spoon equal portions of the stuffing onto each slice and smooth it over the meat with a spatula. Roll and tie with string.

3. Heat the butter in a heavy skillet and brown the meat on all sides, about 10 minutes. Remove the meat rolls and add the onion and remaining garlic to the skillet. Cook, stirring, about three minutes and add the wine.

Stir to dissolve the brown particles that cling to the bottom and sides of the skillet. Add the tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste and bring to the boil. Return the meat rolls, and cover. Cook about 45 minutes. Serve with spaghetti or other pasta and more grated Parmesan cheese.

Yield: Six servings.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Thirty lashes with a nasty old chicken feather for saying that dogs will kill only when they are in pairs or packs. Where did you ever get that idea? It's not true. One dog alone will attack and kill chickens, other animals or even people.

I have owned two chicken-killing dogs at different times, and while the suggested cure of tying the dead chicken around the dog's neck and leaving it there until it rots is good; I have a more effective cure.

I catch the dog with the dead chicken in his mouth, and while holding the dog firmly, I take the chicken from his mouth and then proceed to beat the %$●?! (expletives deleted) out of the dog with the dead chicken. This really works.

No, I am not cruel. I am just sick of losing chickens.

— BILL

DEAR BILL: Thirty lashes with a chicken feather isn't enough. Make it a dog leash. I got the idea that dogs will only kill in pairs or packs from three veterinarians. And have I got a bone to pick with them!

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my husband's snoring. I am a very light sleeper, and he snores so loud that I can't sleep.

I have tried waking him up and asking him to turn over on his side, but that doesn't work. As soon as he's asleep, he rolls over on his back and starts to snore again.

I don't want to start taking pills to make me sleep, and I don't want to have to go into my little boy's room as I have done on several occasions.

My husband was in a hospital two months ago, and he was in a ward because that's all we could afford. Well, he snored so bad they had to move him into a private room at no extra cost to us because he was keeping everybody in the ward awake.

Can you help me?

LIGHT SLEEPER

DEAR LIGHT: Your husband should see an ear, nose and throat doctor. Some snorers can be cured with minor surgery. If he can't, try ear plugs for yourself.

A LIMITED EDITION

The Victoria-based literary magazine Malahat Review will set a publishing precedent next month by including a signed, limited edition of a print by an internationally-known artist.

The July issue of the magazine edited by University of Victoria professor Robin Skelton will be devoted to the work of poet Robert Graves celebrating his 80th birthday July 24.

Each of the 1,500 copies of the issue will contain a signed and numbered seven-color silk screen portrait of the poet by Canadian artist William Featherston.

No magazine has ever contained this feature, said Skelton.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The most recurring type of play in bridge is the finesse. When finessing positions arise, the experienced declarer has no problem about how to take the finesse (or how to avoid it). But the inexperienced declarer goes wrong in many standard-type situations.

In today's deal, there is featured a recurring type of finesse that is often mishandled by the inexperienced player. The deal arose in a rubber-bridge game with a novice being at the helm.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♥.

South's opening bid was marginal, and the final contract of four spades was not a good one. However, as the cards were distributed, 10 tricks were there for the taking.

Dummy's nine of hearts was played on the opening lead, and East's jack won the trick. A low heart to West's king was led next, after which a third heart was played, South ruffing.

Dummy was then entered via the diamond kind in order to take the trump finesse. The queen of spades was led, East covered with the king, and South won the trick with his ace. The loss of a trump trick to West's 10 was now inevitable, as was the loss of a trick to West's ace of clubs.

Having lost the first two heart tricks, the only chance declarer had of fulfilling his contract rested in avoiding the loss of a trump trick. There was just one possible distribution whereby this could be accomplished: East had to have been dealt, specifically, the doubleton K-x of trumps.

After entering dummy via the diamond king, declarer should not have led dummy's queen of spades in taking the trump finesse. This could never be the winning play, for whenever East possessed the trump king he would cover the queen, and the defenders would automatically make a trump trick with either the seven, eight, nine or 10.

A low trump should have been led off the board instead, declarer taking the finesse by inserting the jack. Next would come the trump ace, felling East's king. A low trump to dummy's queen would then pick up West's last trump. West's ace of clubs would now be driven out, and declarer's only losers would be two hearts and one club.

Priority Row Looms at Women's Meet

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — Third World countries are likely to insist economic development comes before sexual equality when the UN Women's Year conference opens here today, with a clash possible as about 5,000 unofficial delegates meet separately from official delegations.

Conference sources said Mexico, Venezuela and an African group headed by Somalia tried Wednesday to get support for a link between the UN's 10-year action plan for women and a declaration demanding redistribution of global wealth.

Mexican Attorney-General Pedro Ojeda has been accepted by all countries as president, but there will be 41 vice-presidents to keep regional groups happy, sources say.

Margaret Whitlam, wife of Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam and a member of the Australian delegation, said in an interview she shared fears of some developed countries that the women's rights issue may be crowded out.

Also at the conference are Lea Rabin, wife of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, Jihat Sadat, wife of Egyptian Premier Anwar Sadat and Beum Nusrat Bhutto, wife of Pakistani Premier Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Organizers said 94 countries and two African liberation movements had confirmed participation, but reservations were open for about a dozen more. Only a few countries, including Saudi Arabia, have said they will not attend.

About 20 per cent of the 1,000 delegates from more than 100 countries at the multi-million dollar conference, however, are men, planners say.

Helvi Sipila of Finland, the UN secretary general for International Women's year, said she hoped the conference would set a precedent, encouraging women to participate more actively in world affairs.

"This is the first time in any inter-governmental conference that so many women have represented their governments," she said. "Women are so inferior still in their own attitudes, they don't recognize their own power."

The conference, called the "world's largest consciousness raising session" by planners, was aimed at launching a 10-year program to end discrimination against women and increase female participation in world affairs.

A non-governmental conference — known as the Tribune — will be held simultaneously in another part of the city.

Some 2,500 delegates were expected to attend the tribune, including feminists Gloia Steinem and Betty Friedan, actress Jane Fonda and political activist Angela Davis.

The tribune, which is not empowered to make official recommendations, will discuss education, family structure, law and the status of women, and political participation.

Sipila, a 60-year-old lawyer, said she hoped conference delegates would pay special attention to political decision-making, educational and economic opportunities, legal status and maternity problems.

Patricia Hutar, co-chairman of the 30-member U.S. delegation, said male participation "is important because in the United States we are looking for participation for both men and women."

But only five men are among the U.S. delegates, including delegation co-chairman Daniel Parker.

A PROTEST DUMP

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The Sierra Club, a leading conservation group, dumped battered radios, used television sets, bottles of sake, Russian-made vodka and cartons labelled Datsun parts and Honda parts into the East River here Wednesday.

The action was to publicize the club's campaign to persuade Americans to boycott Japanese and Russian products until the two countries stop sending whaling ships to sea.

Ranchman's Silver Crown is triple distilled.

Because it's the best way we know to make a better gin.

Ranchman's Silver Crown is an exceptional dry Gin; triple distilling is part of the process that makes it so. Stands to reason if Gin makes a good Martini, double distilled Gin makes one better, triple distilled makes the perfect Martini. Plus a terrific Gin and Tonic, a super Gin Fizz and a host of other fine summertime drinks.

Now Ranchman's Silver Crown has a new look, a new label and a brand new bottle. But what's inside is the same fine quality. Triple distilled.

Jackie Now a 'Hustler Honey'

The pictures, four of them full-page, were selected from a total of 48 photos which Larry Flynt, editor and publisher of the magazine, purchased from an Italian photographer.

They are the same ones taken three years ago with a telescopic lens from a fishing boat off the Island of Skorpios, a private Grecian retreat, while Mrs. Onassis was sunbathing.

The pictures have been published in several European magazines.

The picture layout accompanies a brief biography of Mrs. Onassis from her teenage years to the death of her husband, Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

"If a Burt Reynolds centerfold can attract attention, then I think this has got to be one of the best layouts," Flynt said Wednesday from his panelled office, adorned with mounted centerfolds of Hustler Honies, the equivalent of Playboy's Playmate of the Month.

"We're treating it as a regular newsstory," he said. "She's public domain. There would have been a completely different reaction if the photos were published 10 or 15 years ago," he said.

"The American public was always awed by her behavior. But if she didn't want publicity she wouldn't be getting so much. At least her next husband can see what she looks like before he marries her."

Flynt said Hustler, with a normal circulation of just over one million copies per month, published several million copies of the August edition because of the Jackie pictures.

Que. Denies Morgentaler Beaten

QUEBEC — Published reports that imprisoned abortionist Dr. Henry Morgentaler was physically mistreated while in detention are nothing but "degrading lies," Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said Wednesday.

Choquette told the national assembly there was an orchestrated campaign by certain newspapers, especially those outside Quebec, to degrade the administration of justice in the province. "I regret the spreading of these lies," the minister said.

He said the rehabilitation centre contained no bars and denied the existence of an isolation "hole" for prisoners who refuse to conform to regulations.

The doctor, who allegedly refused to sleep in a dormitory with other detainees earlier this week, was not physically conducted to an isolation room, the minister said.

Dr. Morgentaler, meanwhile, was transferred Wednesday afternoon to the University Hospital Centre in Sherbrooke, about 100 miles southwest of Quebec City, for treatment of a heart condition.

Unconfirmed reports say that Morgentaler is not under guard at the hosptial.

He asked Justice Minister Otto Lang to assure the House that Dr. Morgentaler "is receiving decent and proper treatment."

Lang said the doctor is in the custody of provincial authorities and representations should be directed to them.

TV Chimps Rampage

SOUTHAM, England — Two "television star" chimpanzees went on a rampage that ended with both being shot to death as 200 school children watched.

The animals' owner said Wednesday the trouble may have resulted from a sex problem.

Police armed with shotguns were called out after a male chimp named Bugsy and a female named Rosie — broke out of their cage at a private zoo.

Then the chimps ran to a nearby Roman Catholic elementary school where 200 children were playing. Police fired on Bugsy and Rosie when the pair tried to break into the school building.

2 Hours Of Jagger

TORONTO — Rolling Stones fans packed Maple Leaf Gardens Tuesday and Wednesday nights to hear what many music critics have called the greatest rock and roll band in the world.

More than 18,000 people bought tickets for each show, and were treated to two solid hours of Mick Jagger and the Stones performing such songs as Gimme Shelter, You Can't Always Get What You want, Brown Sugar and Honky Tonk Woman.

Jagger never stopped moving. And at the end of Tuesday's show he threw two buckets of water into the audience to cool things down.

Ten persons were charged with drug offences at Tuesday's concert and one with robbery of two tickets to the concert from a girl.

Police said charges included possession of narcotics and trafficking in LSD, cocaine, MDA, marijuana and the animal anesthetic PCP.

OCEAN CITY, Md. — City council has decided to reinforce a 42-year-old law banning topless males from the boardwalk. By 4-to-3 vote, the council ordered the city attorney to update a 1933 ordinance stipulating that barechested males on the boardwalk are guilty of indecent exposure.

In Not So Many Words
Wallace Enters Race

WASHINGTON — George Wallace Wednesday went about as far as he could go in indicating he'll run for president of the U.S. next year without actually saying so formally.

In an anti-big government speech that drew cheers from the National Federation of Independent Businessmen meeting at the Washington Hilton, Wallace said it is his "intention in 1976 to be involved" in the campaign that will test the survival of what he called "the great, gutsy middle class."

While reserving the right "to change my mind" before next year, Wallace said, "I think I will be involved to carry that message (of the concerns of the middle class) in 1976."

He said he intends to make a formal announcement later on.

The Wallace near-announcement kept his undeclared candidacy on track, humming along on high ratings in the national polls and a full-scale fund-raising operation.

Earlier, the governor's campaign aides had indicated he would make his formal declaration of candidacy at this forum, but it was decided there was no need to do so yet.

One reason for the delay, aides have said, was to enable Wallace to continue focusing on Alabama affairs, thus making him less of a target of declared candidates who are increasingly challenging him.

Wallace took note in his speech of the attacks on him as Governor of Alabama and as an essentially negative campaignr, chiding the New York Times at one point.

"The city of New York has taken the advice of the New York Times all these years," Wallace said, "and has finally gone completely broke. The least thing you can say about Alabama is that we're not about to close down."

WALLACE

Wallace used the independent businessmen's conference as a forum for his familiar message that Washington bureaucrats with their myriad regulators are strangling the small business operator.

If he were president, he said, he would tell the bureaucrats to stop writing and sending out so many regulations.

As a symbolic gesture, he said, he might stand on one of Washington's bridges, "tear them (the regulations) up and throw them in the Potomac."

PEDALLING POLICE CUTTING CRIME . . .

LINDSAY, Calif — Pedalling policemen have helped give this small central California farming town one of the lowest crime rates in the area, Chief John Beene says.

Beene calls the bicycle patrols, now five years old, the "ultimate compromise between walking the beat and the automobile."

Eban Jaunt Under Fire

JERUSALEM — The political opposition complained Wednesday that former foreign minister Abba Eban spent as much on a 12-day stay at the Hotel Pierre in New York as the average Israeli earns in a year.

It suggested Eban reimburse the government. The bill from the hotel came to $4,155 for the period April 17-29.

Ehud Olmert, a member of the opposition Likud bloc, Wednesday released a letter he wrote complaining about Eban's public relations campaign in New York.

Arab Sentenced

GAZA (AP) — A military court in the Israeli-held Gaza Strip has sentenced a 25-year-old Arab to 20 years imprisonment on his conviction of throwing grenades at Israeli cars and for belonging to an Arab underground organization.

Manitoba Session Effects Delayed

WINNIPEG (CP) — The 1975 session of the Manitoba legislature which ended early today could well be described as a session of future expectations.

While some of the 58 bills approved by MLAs during 75 days of deliberations have already had their impact on the general public, the effect of many others will not be apparent for some time to come.

Long-awaited restrictions on absentee landowners, proposals to control conflicts of interests and changes in family law to protect the rights of women will not be approved before next year.

Enabling legislation to allow the government to begin a dental care program for children was passed this year, but the program is not expected to begin before the fall of 1976.

A new Planning Act to be proclaimed later this year will give local authorities and the provincial government greater control over land use and development, but its impact clearly will not be felt overnight.

Proclamation of the Pension Benefits Act is also to be delayed to allow further study of the proposals to protect the rights of employees involved in private pension plans.

Finally, changes in the lending policies of the Manitoba Development Corp. authorized by the legislature may put the MDC on a sounder financial footing in the long run, but they are unlikely to stifle persistent opposition complaints about loans an investments of the Crown agency in the short run.

The session was one of the shorter ones during the six years the New Democratic Part of Premier Ed Schreyer has been in office in Manitoba.

Most of the programs of immediate concern to Manitobans came in the $1-billion budget introduced April 24. These included a three-cent increase in gasoline and motive fuel taxes, increased property ta xand cost-of-living rebates and a revenue-sharing scheme for municipal governments.

Lougheed 'Hindered'

RED DEER (CP) — Pierre Berton, Canadian author and broadcaster, said Wednesday that Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed's energy policy will hinder him in any federal aspirations he may have.

"I don't see how Lougheed can run nationally with his regional attitude," Berton said in an interview.

"He will have no trouble becoming leader of the federal" Progressive Conservative Party, "but he will have difficulty" winning a federal election.

"When Alberta was a have-not province it benefitted a lot from the rest of Canada. Now the rest of the country feels that Alberta doesn't share its benefits."

CALGARY MAYOR TO SNUB 'TWIN'

CALGARY (CP) — A 50-member delegation from Jaipur, India — Calgary's twin city — arrives today for a three-week visit and the twinning ceremony. But Mayor Sykes, who is opposed to the twinning, said he will not attend the twinning ceremony.

The twinning was narrowly approved by City Council in 1973 — by a vote of six to five. The twinning was proposed by the Calgary World City Society, formed to "promote world peace by endeavoring to make the citizens of Calgary aware of their responsibilities as world citizens."

The Jaipur delegation, led by Ram Kishore Vyas, speaker of the Rajasthan legislative assembly, includes parliamentarians, municipal councillors, businessmen, and artists. They are returning a visit by members of the World Society to Jaipur last year.

PWA Purchase Review Opposed

EDMONTON (CP) — None of the interventions filed with the Canadian Transport Commission about the Alberta government's purchase of Pacific Western Airlines are "of substance," Transportation Minister Hugh Horner said Wednesday.

Dr. Horner, speaking in the legislature, repeated previous calls for the commission to call off its review of the purchase.

Tot Tumbles Into Deep Well

ROBINHOOD, Sask. (CP) — A four-year-old Robinhood district girl was in fair condition in hospital Wednesday after falling 85 feet into an old well.

Police said Tammy Craig apparently pried a heavy metal cap off the well and fell into the 20-inch opening, landing in about six feet of water.

Alberta A-G Slaps Judges

EDMONTON (CP) — Provincial court judges in Calgary were told by Attorney-General Jim Foster Wednesday to "have more careful regard" for provincial laws.

Foster, answering questions by Ron Ghitter (PC — Calgary-Buffalo) in the legislature, said some Calgary judges grant restricted driving privileges to persons convicted of impaired driving. That is permitted under the Criminal Code of Canada, but prohibited by provincial laws.

"I am trying to suggest with respect that perhaps members of the provincial court in the great city of Calgary should have more careful regard for the laws of this province as they exist today."

GARDENING

Get Ready for Mid-July Sowing

Checking the supply of seeds on hand and making a list of those needed for the mid-July sowings is a profitable way of occuping a leisure hour.

Newcomers to this area, and some beginners not familiar with our strange ways of gardening, find the sowing of an almost complete vegetable garden in mid-July beyond comprehension. Yet we old-timers do it every year to have a continuous supply of fresh vegetables throughout the fall.

The one difficulty we often encounter is obtaining the seeds we need in July. By that time most seed displays have been dismantled and the pickets that were not sold are on their way back to the growers.

That is why it is profitable, and prudent, to check our stock now while the displays are still around.

For this mid-July sowing of a vegetable garden we use the same varieties as for early spring sowings since the crops will mature in temperatures comparable to late spring and early summer.

The main difference is that germination takes place in two days instead of two weeks, and the seed rows may need shading with shiplap boards set on edge on the sunny side of the rows and supported with pegs driven into the ground.

It doesn't pay to use any covers flat on the soil because insects collect beneath and devour the seedlings as soon as they break through the soil.

The seeds you will need depends on what is already growing for use in September, and the time those crops will be ready.

Your choice of vegetables is almost unlimited, but the crop must mature within 75 days, the length of time between mid-July and the end of September.

This excludes such crops as parsnips, squash, pole beans, tomatoes, and any other vegetable needing a full season to develop.

Added to the normal spring crops of lettuce, carrots, beets, peas, bunching onions, spinach, Swiss chard, an French or dwarf beans, are the definite fall crops such as purple-top turnips, endive or escarole, late fall and winter cabbage, and the spring cabbage called Flower-of-spring.

These crops, together with parsnips, root artichokes, Brussels sprouts, kale, and leaks already in the garden, and squash in storage, give variety to fall meals up to Christmas and beyond.

The good point about being able to use normal spring varieties is that surplus seed can be stored in a cool, dry place for use next spring, and nothing is wasted.

While the mid-July sowings will have to be made in spaces vacated by the early spring sowings, the experienced gardener is careful to plan the garden so that these spaces will be close to a good path that can be safely and easily negotiated in inclement weather.

If the garden has not been planned this way it is worth while looking around for some good boards that can be placed on the wet soil to provide safe access to the planted areas.

Knowing the condition of the vegetable garden in October, some old-timers make portable sections of slatted sidewalk expressly for this purpose. Each section consists of two six-foot 2 by 4's with cross slats about 18 inches long.

These sections are heavy enough to sit firmly on the soil, yet light enough to handle, and require only a small space for storage.

Without some such amenity, the cook will find it more pleasant to take the car to the supermarket in rainy weather than to wallow in mud for the good things from the garden.

Guerrillas Take Ad to Demand Ransom

WASHINGTON (WP) — An Argentine guerrilla group announced, in an advertisement published today in the Washington Post, that it would release two wealthy Argentine executives kidnapped nine months ago if their company paid a large ransom and met other demands.

The paid ad appeared to be ambiguously worded and its authenticity could not be verified ednesday. It seemed to indicate, however, that most of the demands had already been met and that the executives' release might be expected today.

On Sept. 19 — nine months ago today — terrorists in Buenos Aires kidnapped Jorge Born Jr. and Juan Born, brothers and executives of Bungey Born Co., one of the world's largest commodities trading enterprises.

A company manager and a chauffeur were killed in the rush-hour ambush.

The kidnappers were quickly identified as the Montoneros, an outlawed urban guerrilla group that claims loyalty to the late Argentine president, Juan Peron.

The ad in the Post was signed by the Montoneros.

Since the kidnapping, negotiations have been reported under way in several countries, including Spain, Switzerland and the Soviet Union.

Police sources in Argentina have reported ransom demands as high as $50 million.

The advertisement referred only to payment of "a very large sum" as one condition of the two executives' release.

In addition, it mentioned delivery of "merchandise" worth $1 million to townships, factories, schools and hospitals.

The text of the advertisement was brought to the Post Wednesday by a Washington lawyer, formerly a Justice Department attorney, who asked not to be identified.

The lawyer said the Post was the only U.S. newspaper asked to run the ad. It is expected also to appear in some newspapers in other countries, he said, but he declined to name them.

The lawyer said the text of the ad had been picked up Wednesday morning at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York by a client, whom he declined to identify. The lawyer said he did not know where the flight originated.

The lawyer described the ad's publication as essential to the executives' release, but he said he did not know whether it was the last step or how soon after its publication they might be freed.

"I never pinpointed when, after this, they will be released," he said.

In today's ad, the Montoneros said they had extensively questioned the Born brothers and imposed a series of "penalties" against the company as a result of a revolutionary "trial."

The two executives, it said, received one-year "prison" sentences that were "later commuted to nine months when the company fulfilled the remainder of the obligations."

Amtrack Pays Rape Victim

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) Amtrak has been ordered to pay $30,000 to a teen-age girl raped on one of its trains.

Judge Robert Chapman, who ordered the payment designated $10,000 as punitive damages, saying the failure of one of the railroad's female employees to aid the victim was an "act of indifference and disregard for her duties."

Chapman said the woman employee had heard the victim's screams and should have obtained help. He also said she refused to aid the victim after the conductor and others rescued her and the victim's ordeal was prolonged because of the inaction.

The 18-year-old victim had charged the railroad with failing to provide the highest degree of care to prevent her from attack and with violating its duty to her as a paying passenger.

Study Ordered On Car Pool

The city of Victoria might find it more econocmical to buy and operate its ownsmall find it more economical to fleet of automobiles for staff use, rather than paying its employees for the use of their private cars, Al. Sam Bawlf suggested today.

Bawlf, chairman of the finance committee, was apparently shocked to learn that it cost the city about $42,000 for mileage allowance payments to staff last year.

Told that some 40 to 45 employees were the recipients, he noted: "This represents on average about $1,000 apiece . . . I would think that $40,000 would service the cost of (purchasing) a lot of automobiles."

The discussion arose when the finance committee considered a recommendation for increased mileage allowances from city manager Jim Bramley.

Present rate is 14 cents per mile for union staff and 12 cents per mile for non-union staff, with a maximum allowance in effect for almost all personnel.

Bramley had suggested an increase to 18 cents per mile for all staff, for the first 500 miles driven each month. Above that total the rate would drop to 10 cents.

The committee tabled the matter and instructed staff to study the feasibility of purchasing vehicles for a city car pool.

Pension Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — A long-promised bill designed to assist elderly couples now living on one pension got final Commons approval Wednesday, only 15 days after it was introduced.

Despite some criticisms, the opposition parties co-operated with a government request for quick passage of the bill to give monthly payment to old age pensioners' spouses aged 60 to 64.

Starting Oct. 1, it would give extra income to approximately 85,000 spouses. Old age security payments now are available only to persons 65 and older.

Co-Ed Camping

Victoria's YM-YWC is experimenting in co-ed camping this year with one eight-day session for children eight-15 years.

Mixed camping sessions are already policy for adult and day camp programs and the Y's Outdoor Wilderness III but have never been run at Camp Thunderbird in Sooke.

Boys' programes will be directed by male staff members and girls' programs by female members, "Y" health and physical education director George Alliston said.

"They'll do some programs together and some separately," he said.

Waterfront lessons and games could be operated together for instance, while rougher games could be segregated.

Residential co-ed camping is being successfully run in other parts of Canada, he said.

"Co-ed camps may very well be the thing of the future at Camp Thunderbird," said Outdoor Education director John Durkin.

Segregated camps for both boys and girls will still be run during July and August, with the co-ed period from June 28 to July 5.

Programs in all sessions will include candeing, cycling and hiking at the 1,000-acre camp in the Sooke Hills.

Hearing-Aid Protection

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed rule to allow hearing aid buyers to cancel purchases within 30 days could save consumers, particularly the elderly, more than $10 million annually, the U.S. Federal Trade Commission says.

Heraing aid manufacturers said that estimate was too high, however, and called the proposed regulation "heavy handed" and an "ominous precedent."

$250,000 in Relief

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government plans to contribute up to $250,000 this year for international relief projects, Premier Ed Schreyer told the legislature Tuesday.

Schreyer said the government will match donations to international organizations active in the province on a dollar-for-dollar basis to $250,000.

In turn, he said the federal government has agreed to provide up to $500,000 in matching funds for contributions from individuals and the provincial government.

French School Honors

Grade 5 student Micheline Lequerrier was awarded the prize for academic excellence Wednesday evening during the first graduating ceremony of CFB Esquimalt's Dependents School.

Other students who received awards included grade 7 students Pierre and Paul Leonard, who received the Major B. Derible Athletic Trophy and grade 5 student Bernard O'Ree who was awarded the Victoria Times book prize for distinction in English.

The school was established two years ago at CFB Esquimalt to provide edeucation in French to Department of National Defence personnel and employees' dependents whose mother tongue is French. It is fully operated and supported by the DND.

All subjects are taught in French except for English Language Arts where the British Columbia curriculum is followed.

The school has 32 students from kindergarden to grade 7. There are four full-time teachers and one part-time.

Prison Art On Display

Watercolors, oil paintings and sculptures — the work of William Head Penitentiary prisoners — will be part of an art exhibit beginning Friday at the Greater Victoria Public Library's central branch.

Forty items will be shown on the second floor of the Yates and Blanshard St. building where a now-discontinued art collection was held.

William Head has carried on an arts and crafts program for more than a year under the direction of Jim Lindsay of Victoria.

ADVERTISERS
DO YOU HAVE AN IMAGE?

• I DON'T KNOW. WHAT DO YOU MEAN — "DO I HAVE AN IMAGE?"
A good advertising image is a mental picture that reflects the kind of merchandise or service being offered for sale. For example: A quality furniture store should LOOK like a quality furniture store not a bargain hunter's paradise. And a budget priced store should always look like what it IS — so that it attracts the kind of people who are looking for the kind of merchandise it sells.

• YOU MEAN THE RITZ SHOULDN'T LOOK LIKE JOE'S DINER?

• HOW DO I GET AN IMAGE?
Well, first, you decide what kind of store you are — what sort of people you're appealing to, and then you design all your advertising to fit. You stick to the same style, so that people recognize your ad as YOURS as soon as they see it.

Well, like we said — you attract the right kind of customer to begin with. You're not going to sell a $900 dining suite to someone who's looking for a 79.95 kitchen set anyway, so why waste your advertising dollars? And people who want elegant dining facilities are going to be disappointed if all you serve is chili-burgers for 1.69

• ANYTHING ELSE?
Yes. By seeing your company advertise in a consistent manner, the public learns to gain confidence in YOUR firm. It establishes YOU in the mind of the people as a reliable, ongoing firm that knows its business — one that is going to be there to stand behind what it sells for years to come.

• BUT I DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT DESIGNING ADS. THEN WHAT?
That's what your two daily newspapers can do for you. We have a team of sales people who've been in the business a long time. They are trained to advise you on your budget. And, backing them up, is a team of artists and copy-writers who are trained to design an advertising campaign that will reflect your image and up your profits by increasing your business at a sure, steady rate.

• WHAT IS AN ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN ANYWAY?
That's a planned series of advertisements designed to do a specific job. It's the only way to advertise effectively. You establish your goals; our account representative brings them to the creative people, who work out the best way to reach your target. They use their imagination and their knowhow to think up something especially for you.

• HOW DO I KNOW I'LL LIKE IT?
You're given an artist's rough of your ad campaign so you can discuss it with others in your firm, and with your account rep. before you start the series. And re-vamp if necessary. Then, you get proofs of your ads after they've been typeset and the art is in place.

• HOW DO I KNOW I CAN AFFORD IT?
Because your account rep. knows your business; he knows what your advertising budget should be, based on your volume and what your cost-to-sell figures should be. So, when the creative department designs your ads, these figures are borne in mind so that the amount of space you buy fits in with what you can afford.

• BUT ISN'T IT EXPENSIVE TO HAVE THIS SPECIAL TREATMENT?
It costs no more than just buying space. Our creative team has books and books of headings, borders, drawings, sketches, and many different type styles to utilize. They are creative people who can put these things to good use for your benefit at no extra charge. They'll make up a series of ads that reflect the image you want to create, so that your ads are YOURS and YOURS ALONE.

Talk to one of the helpful account representatives at Victoria's two daily newspapers soon

Synod Rejects Anglican, United Church Merger

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Thirty-two years of discussion and study concerning the merger of the Anglican and United Churches under the name of the Church of Christ in Canada appear to be wasted following a decision to reject it by the 27th general Anglican Synod.

The synod is the highest court of the church.

"We have not just turned the clock back 10 years but have gone even further," chancellor Stuart Ryan of the Anglican diocese of Ontario said following the vote.

The synod, however, Wednesday accepted the ordination of women into the priesthood.

Bishops opposed to the principle were given the right to refuse to perform the ceremony.

The principle was accepted by the 1973 general synod in Regina. Acceptance had to pass two synods to become canonical and law.

In light of known opposition among clergy and laity throughout the church, acceptance of women's ordination was large.

A resolution recommending that all types of lay ministries be open to qualified persons without regard to sex was passed unanimously.

Canon Eugene Fairweather, a Toronto theologian, said the basic question was not whether women should be priests, "but whether they can be."

"Many people in the church think this is a radical and destructive change in the pattern of our concern," he said.

"The priesthood is a male prerogative. We are trying to include women in what essentially is a male model."

W. R. Shepherd of Toronto took another view: "If a properly trained woman feels the call of her Lord to serve in that way, she should have the right."

'Vigilantes' Arrested

LENNOX, Calif. (UPI) — Four men and two women were arrested Tuesday night as alleged "vigilantes" who threw a suspected burglar over a cliff to his death for the theft of a television set.

Sheriff's deputies booked the six on charges of suspicion of murder, burglary, kidnapping, false imprisonment and receiving stolen property.

Deputies said they had received a tip that the death of Joe Arce, 26, was not accidental. Arce's body was found last Thursday on the rocks by the shore of the ocean, beneath a tall cliff in the wealthy Palos Verdes area.

Deputies now believe Arce's death was the result of the theft of a television set from an unidentified person in Lawndale on June 10.

Hard Times For Sunday Observer

LONDON (Reuter) — Sources say that The Observer, the influential independent Sunday newspaper, has warned its staff that it may have to close in September unless the work force is cut by as much as one-third.

The newspaper's management has called for a meeting today between union leaders and other representatives from the 700-strong staff to dicuss losses estimated at aobut $1.15 million so far this year.

The sources say that staff cuts, probably among production workers rather than the 60 or 70 journalists, are necessary for the newspaper's survival.

The Observer has faced heavy financial burdens since The Times moved out of the building and printing plant they shared about one year ago.

The Observer's circulation has dropped to about 790,000 from a 1967 high of more than 900,000.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An absolute discharge was granted a 52-year-old Sidney store owner in provincial court Wednesday after he pleaded guilty to selling Irish Sweepstake tickets.

Arthur Frederick Critchison, 2440 Beacon, admitted selling the tickets at Sidney News and Variety Store on April 18.

"I took over the store April 1 and the tickets were part of the stock that came with the purchase of the operation," Critchison told the court. "I didn't know it was illegal to sell them."

"This is a typical case for discharge," said defence lawyer Ralph Stevenson.

"Here is a gentleman of undisputed character who has had no intention to break the law — he acted under ignorance of the law," Stevenson said.

But prosecutor Nicholas Lang said ignorance of the law is no defence.

"And I believe it is of fairly widespread knowledge that the sale of Irish Sweepstake tickets is illegal."

"But will a sentence stop the sale of Irish Sweeps?" asked Judge Douglas Campbell.

"In theory, yes," Lang replied.

Campbell said because it may work in theory is not a valid reason to impose a sentence in this case.

An "unidentified male person", charged Tuesday with obtaining food by fraud, was found by psychiatrist Dr. John Evans to be mentally ill.

The man refused to disclose his name, age and address to the court Tuesday, although he did say he has "tended for use the name Peter . . . Christ . . . and J. Angel."

Legal aid duty counsel Brock Emberton questioned Dr Evans as to how he arrived at the conclusion the man was mentally ill.

"By the irrelevancy of his replies and verbalization which had quaint biblical tones as if he was conveying communication from a spiritual sphere," Evans said.

"He also believes himself to be an angel, although his name may possibly be Thomas William Becker," the doctor added.

Lang made application for a two-week remand to Riverview for psychiatric observation, but Campbell ordered a 0hhloisthgETHR remand to Friday for further psychiatric assessment.

William Stefanciw, 40, of 501 Pandora, charged last Thursday with two counts of common assault, was found fit for trial following psychiatric assessment by Dr. Evans.

"Stafanciw is wary, suspicious of the motives of people but this does not represent a mental disorder as such," Evans said.

Lang alleged that Stefanciw has assaulted Chung You Wong and Wing Kam Chew last Wednesday.

He said Stafanciw had been engaging in this type of conduct since 1969 but the Chinese people were afraid to report it to police.

Defence lawyer Dorothy Fetterley said Mrs. Brisson and her husband have been ill, live on a meagre pension and find it difficult to pay the rent. Fetterley asked for a conditional discharge and Judge Douglas Campbell appeared ready to agree.

But Lang said it would be contrary to public interest to grant a discharge.

"If a discharge is appropriate in this case, I suggest almost every case of shoplifting before this court would be appropriate for a discharge and that is not what Parliament intended," Lang said.

But Campbell decided a discharge was appropriate as a sentence might jeopardize Mrs. Brisson's job as a store clerk.

Mrs. Brisson's husband Armand George, 57, who also pleaded guilty to shoplifting at Maverick Mart on March 24, received a suspended sentence.

He admitted placing a package of cigars in his jacket pocket and a package of premium liver sausage inside his shirt.

Fetterley told the court Brisson has had two recent cancer operations. She said he is also on probation for a prior shoplifting conviction.

Campbell decided that on the basis of Brisson's health, a suspended sentence was warranted.

B.C. Hospital Technicians Taking Vote

Strike votes by 2,500 members of the Health Sciences Association at hospitals in Victoria and across B.C. will start later today, the first such votes in the union's five-year history.

Jack Campbell, executive director of the HSA which represents laboratory and x-ray technicians, hospital pharmacists, physiotherapists, dieticians and medical records librarians, said today the results of the vote in 81 B.C. hospitals should be compiled by late next week.

There are 140 HSA members in the Royal Jubilee Hospital and 83 HSA members in Victoria General Hospital.

The union removed a no-strike clause in its constitution at a convention in May because the union has been "pushed around so much" in negotiations with the B.C. Health Association, formerly the B.C. Hospitals' Association, Campbell said.

Negotiations for a new contract started in early December and broke off this week after an offer from the B.C. Health Association which would have given some HSA members $39-a-month pay cuts, Campbell said.

Provincial mediator Ed Sims has withdrawn from the negotiations and is now preparing his report for Labor Minister Bill King. No strike action is possible until the report has been handed in, possibly next week.

Campbell has been instructed by the HSA executive to arrange meetings with other hospital unions in the event that a strike is called.

He said a decision on whether to ask the other unions to honor picket lines set up will be made only after discussions with the other unions — the Hospital Employees' Association, the Registered Nurses' Association of B.C. and the International Union of Operating Engineers.

In the event of a strike, the HSA will maintain emergency services, Campbell said.

He said the union is putting together an HSA emergency committee at each hospital and the committee will act as a contact between the hospital and the union. In the event of an emergency during a strike, the committee would make sure that necessary HSA services would be provided.

Most of the HSA members are either radiology or laboratory technicians and the union is seeking parity for those members with the registered nurses.

Campbell said technicians require one year more training than registered nurses but are paid about $200 a month less than the nurses.

B.C. Health Association spokesman Joseph Roberts said the $39 a month pay cuts arose from the reclassification of some employees.

"Many of the employees would jump a classification grade (upwards)," Roberts said.

He said the hospitals' proposals are "just as realistic as (the Union) proposals which would have seen technicians paid considerably more than registered nurses."

NUCLEAR TEST SHAKES VEGAS

MERCURY, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear device with a force at least 10 times greater than the atomic blast that levelled Hiroshima in the Second World War was detonated below the Nevada desert shortly after dawn today, creating a tremor felt in Las Vegas, 95 miles away.

There were no immediate reports of any damage from the tremor.

Forest Firms Pinched, Seek Union Restraint

Senior executives of B.C.'s forest companies today warned that the industry which represents about 50 per cent of the provinical economy, is in danger of becoming unprofitable and withering away.

The executives, members of Forest Industrial Relations and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, bargaining agents for the forest companies, said rising costs, particularly labor costs, are making the industry non-competitive in the world markets.

As the executives were making what they called a "sobering economic message to the people of B.C." a spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America, now in the midst of contract negotiations with FIR, said a strike vote by the 32,000 coastal woodworkers should be completed by the end of next week.

The next meeting between the union, which has been without a collective agreement since midnight Saturday, and the forest companies is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

"Traditionally the strike vote was taken prior to the expiry of the contract, but this year the bargaining committee decided to wait a little longer," the spokesman said.

Results of the strike vote will be released June 27.

The union is asking for an across the board increase of $1 an hour plus a 24 cents an hour cost of living adjustment, improved health and welfare benefits and a dental plan in the one year contract.

FIR chairman Peter Bentley, president of Canadian Forest Prodects, said today the IWA demands amount to more than a $4 an hour increase, "not $1 as the IWA has publicized."

"We have reached the point in the industry's struggle for survival that having been caught between the demands of all levels of government and labor, we have been squeezed to the point where we must reverse the trend if in the mutual interest of all concerned, there is to be a viable future," Bentley said.

George Flater, vice-president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, involved in negotiations with the Canadian Paperworkers Union and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, said if B.C. producers have to absorb higher costs the profit margin will make it unattractive for companies to expand.

"If we are not competitive in price and manufacturing costs, we won't be able to provide new jobs and work opportunities and we could eventually have less jobs," Flater said.

EPP STILL PAID

Deputy attorney general for corrections E. W. Epp was ordered to take a leave of absence because "the government lost confidence in his ability to manage the (corrections) branch," a government spokesman said today.

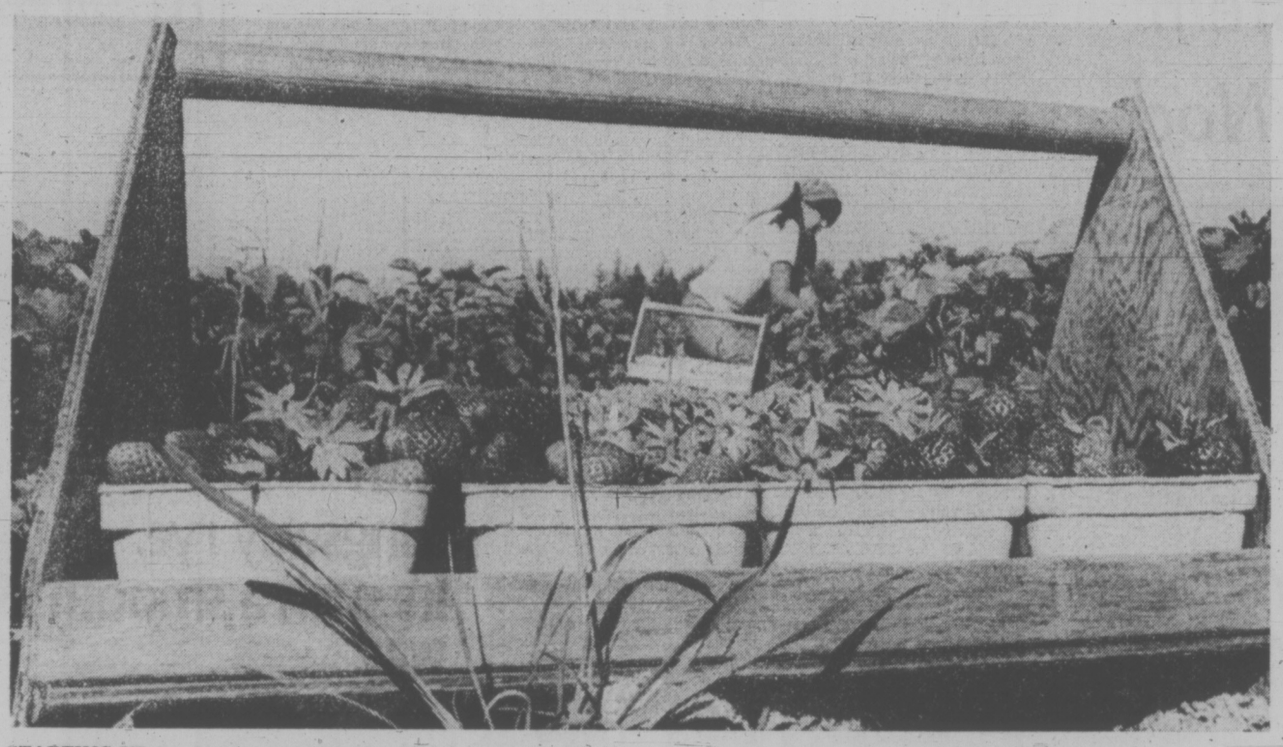
Deputy Attorney General Dave Vickers said the decision to relieve Epp of his duties was based entirely on a question of management, especially in the area of budget and staff deployment.

Those reasons should have been "very clear" to Epp, said Vickers.

The corrections director, who was ordered to take the three month leave of absence Monday by Attorney-general Alex Macdonald said Wednesday he was not given any reason for the order and "was completely in the dark."

Epp is being paid during the leave of absence and according to the order will return to work for the government in some other capacity at the end of three months.

Vickers said any further comment on Epp's departure would have to come from Macdonald, who is in England this week.



STARTING UP for the home table is this year's strawberry season on the Saanich Peninsula. Season is expected to last three weeks and will be followed by raspberry and loganberry crops. The Canada Farm Labor Office of Canada Manpower has 250 persons registered looking for berry picking work and is expecting growers to call soon for workers.

Arabs 'Building Arsenal'

Times News Services

Israeli Defence Minister Shimon Peres said today that despite a trend for peace in the Middle East Arab nations are building up a war arsenal more powerful than that of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

And in Minneapolis Wednesday, President Ford warned of a "drift" toward war in the region.

Ford said any new fighting in the Middle East would be more dangerous than past conflicts and would include a paralyzing oil embargo.

The president's emphasis on the "drift" in the Mideast came as somewhat of a surprise after his discussions with Egyptian presidnet Anwar Sadat June 1-2 in Salzburg, and his discussions last week in Washington with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

"It is a potentially very volatile situation that could erupt into a real tough conflit any time, and the longer we drift with no prospect of action, the more potential the igniting becomes," Ford said.

"We are working with the whole Arab complex because another war out there would be worse than the Yom Kippur war of 1973. It would be

Cost-of-Living Boost Highest in Vancouver

OTTAWA (CP) — Cost-of-living increases in May hit residents of Vancouver and St. John, N.B., the hardest, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Smallest increase in major cities across the country were recorded in Halifax and St. John's, Nfld.

Separate figures are not calculated for Victoria but factors here are considered to be the same as for Vancouver with many prices being somewhat higher.

The price indexes do not measure where goods and services are cheapest, only how fast prices rise or decline on average within the cities.

The government agency reported last week that the general consumer price index across the country rose eight-tenths of one per cent in May.

In Halifax and St. John's the May increase was one half of one per cent.

In Vancouver and Saint John it was 1.1 per cent.

Among the 14 cities, Halifax and Ottawa had the best price performance over May, 1974, with increases of 8.9 per cent.

The largest 12-month increase was in Winnipeg, where the index rose 11.2 per cent.

Food prices rose in all centres in May, although the price of most meats was down in St. John's beef and poultry prices dropped in Halifax and the cost of eggs, dairy products and bakery and cereal products declined in Edmonton.

The smallest food price increase for May was in Edmonton, where the food index rose three-tenths of one per cent. Regina had the smallest food price increase for the 12-month period with a 7.6-per-cent rise.

Saint John recorded the highest food price increases for both May and the 12-months. Food costs there jumped 1.8 per cent in May and were up 13.5 per cent for the 12-month period.

The rise in shelter costs in May was the smallest in St. John's, up three-tenths of one per cent.

The largest increase was in Vancouver, where shelter costs were up 1.1 per cent.

Halifax was best in shelter costs over the 12 months, with an increase of 5.8 per cent. The largest 12-month increase was a 12.2-per-cent rise in Winnipeg.

Clothing prices dropped in three cities in May — declining two-tenths of one per cent in Winnipeg and one-tenth of one per cent in both Toronto and Montreal.

The largest increases in clothing prices occurred in Ottawa, Saint John and Thunder Bay, Ont., where prices rose four-tenths of one per cent in May.

At the same time, Thunder Bay had the smallest increase in clothing prices over 12 months, with a rise of 3.9 per cent. The largest increase in clothing prices over the 12-month period was in St. John's, up 8.3 per cent.

Leftists Pelt Catholics

LISBON (CP) — Troops today evacuated about 600 Catholics, most of them women, trapped all night in the palace of the Archbishop of Lisbon by angry left-wing extremists.

The Catholics, some of them injured in a clash with the leftists outside the palace Wednesday night were driven off in open army trucks.

The Catholics had tried to stage a counter-demonstration against a left-wing rally in support of workers who had occupied a Catholic radio station. The occupation has threatened a church-state split.

The Catholics took refuge in the palace, headquarters of the Portuguese Catholic Church. The leftists, at times numbering over 5,000, threw stones, iron bars and sticks, and shouted "Death to Fascism."

Soldiers guarding the palace said after today's evacuation that only a handful of Catholics were injured, none of them seriously.

As they were driven off in open army trucks, the surging crowd of leftists pelted them with rubbish and shouted insults.

There were nuns and a number of children among the evacuees.

Weekly Paycheque Averages $197.07

OTTAWA (CP) — The average industrial wage rose one per cent during April to $197.07 a week, 14.6 per cent higher than a year ago, Statistics Canada said Wednesday in a preliminary report.

The consumer price index rose by one-half of a percentage point in April, 11.1 per cent above a year earlier.

The industrial wage average covers about 4.5 million workers but does not include those in agriculture, government service, fishing and the military.

Statistics Canada says there were weekly gains in earnings in all the major regions and for all industry divisions except forestry.

New BCPC Plan Cuts Bunker Fuel

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Lechner, general manager of the Crown-owned British Columbia Petroleum Corporation, said Wednesday the corporation has modified its proposed $350 million refinery to reduce by half the amount of bunker fuel produced.

As originally outlined, the refinery would have produced 40 per cent of its output in the form of bunker fuel. The petroleum industry average is between 12 and 15 per cent bunker fuel.

Cliff Goddard, B.C. corporate manager with Imperial Oil Ltd., had said Tuesday the heavy emphasis on bunker fuel could only lead to hefty losses by the government refinery.

He said bunker oil, used mainly in B.C. in pulp and cement plants and in ships, is a glut on the market now and can be bought at prices lower than that of Alberta crude oil landed in the Vancouver area for refining.

Lechner said Goddard's criticism was based on old information.

British Columbia Petroleum decided two weeks ago to change the design of its plant to reduce the volume of bunker fuel by half, Lechner said.

He also said the corporation is flexible and can react to any changes in its market forecasts.

Lechner also rejected figures used by Goddard in predicting an annual $50 million loss by B.C. Petroleum.

Goddard also said a BCPC refinery would either overwhelm the B.C. market or it would operate at a fraction of its rated capacity, causing losses because of idle capital investment.

Wall St. High Priests Weigh Barrett

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

hallowed of these concrete halls that Premier David Barrett and his small entourage went to witness, if not to worship, on their way to shabbier, older, yet not necessarily wiser, institutions in London.

"We have to be careful about the word socialism," said one of the priests of Wall St. "Some people in this country tend to equate it with communism. The important thing is that British Columbia has a strong, resource-based economy."

It also has a budgetary surplus, which makes it unusual on this continent. And money is a much more significant world than socialism.

"Actually, B.C. has a better reception here than in Canda," the priest confided. "Here we look at the broad picture."

But Barrett has to be on best behavior, neat in regulation blue suit, to hobnob with the temple treasurers.

He is taken in hand, literally, by Salomon Brthers, which occupies three floors of One New York Plaza, opposite the Staten Island ferry, and greets visitors with liveried flunkeys in a sumptuous forty-second floor reception suite, littered with a few thousand dollars worth of antique furnishings.

Salomon Brothers is B.C.'s fiscal agent, and its executives groom Barrett for private sessions with the men who have the gold that streets are paved with.

They also see that the premier is neither at loose ends nor underfed during his two-day visit, providing two luncheons, a dinner and tickets to a baseball game.

Thier interest is not political, but purely business. They get a piece of the action when B.C. raises money.

This has just happened, to everbody's satisfaction — Barrett, Wall St., and Salomon Bros. A $125 million B.C. Hydro bond issue was postponed in March, when the going interst rate was between 10 and 11 per cent. Last year Hydro had been stung for 10 and a quarter per cent on a $100 millon issue. But the postponed issue went out at the beginning of this month at nine and five-eighths.

This was such a relief that B.C. decided to grab an extra $25 million while the going was good, and bumped up the bond issue accordingly.

"As it turns out, if they'd waited until next month the

Mr. Hartley, Meet Mr. Dennis Cocke

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

For a little while this week one arm of the provincial government reached out and snatched some downtown land from another arm of the same government.

It was bought for hospital expansion almost three years ago from the Sisters of St. Ann after interminable quarrels which involved the hospital, the city of Victoria, the regional hospital board and the provincial government of the day.

In a compromise deal, the province and regional hospital board bought the land for close to $1 million, the province held title and the land was then leased back to the hospital.

The government changed, hospital planning remained bogged down and the years slipped past.

Last Friday the hospital received a letter from the provincial public works department. The message: your lease on this land ends in one year.

What plans did the provincial government have for the land then? None at all at the moment, said Public Works Minister Bill Hartley. It was just a case of consolidating the two pieces of property.

But what about the agreement of three years ago that this land was for hospital expansion?

Well, said Hartley, that was before the recent regional hospital roles policy which dictates that Victoria General won't expand, will in fact be scaled down.

That's when the behind-the-scenes discussions began. Because while Victoria General may not grow, one possibility is it will be rebuilt on the land in question. There has also been talk of building an extended care hospital on that land.

It seems certain that Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Hartley had a talk about it.

The word today is that the public works department will rescind the letter cancelling Victoria General's lease on the land.

Meanwhile local hospital officials aren't talking about it. They say they have to live with the provincial government, even when one arm of it isn't always sure what another arm is up to.

A Much Maligned Public —Our Only Guarantee

Some notes here the other day to explain why I no longer listen to hot-line programs have resulted in a letter from one of our constituents who says, "Just as I thought! Your cynicism about public opinion, notably in your diatribe against capital punishment, is now confirmed. Obviously you are against the hot-liners because they give the public its say."

This hardly rates a reply since I went to considerable pains to explain that I don't think such shows are at all representative of the real public and that those who phone in are very often motivated more by hatred than reason.

Fact is, I happen to believe that "the public" is probably the best guarantee, perhaps the only one, that what we know as the democratic system will survive. When you consider what the manipulators try to do with this amorphous mass, the calculated and computerized pressures and pandering that seem deliberately contrived to create a malleable, imbecile public, it's a marvel and a miracle that it remains a real hope for freedom and progress.

It comes down to this: I have a great, abiding faith in the intelligence and sensibility of The General Public and almost none whatever in those who must directly shape and influence it.

Any wise or reasonable step forward that's brought about at the public's instigation or with its approval — and, incredibly enough, they far out-number the reversals — is achieved in spite of a gigantic conspiracy to reduce the average man to infantilism.

If he isn't being scared to death with scorn and threats he's being tickled under the chin with cries of "kitchy-koo, kitchy-koo." The wonder of it is that he should ever have a mind or a will of his own.

Consider some of the awful pressures on this Average Man to bend him into the image that will best serve those who feed upon him.

The politicians, with rare exceptions, treat him as if truth or honesty were forms of poison that might kill him outright and have devised a whole language of dougle-talk, evasion and fraudulent promises that would shame any self-respecting con artist.

The business man saddles him with products of virtually instant obsolesence, interest rates beyond Shylock's wildest dreams of avariace and a code of ethics loose enough to ensnare any trusting soul.

The advertising man brainwashes him with phoney symbols of status and plays upon every fear from unrequited love to terminal sickness, exploiting the gamut of human weaknesses from pride to greed.

The church man does his best to terrorize him with righteous witchcraft and genteel voodoo to degrade every natural function in the name of original sin and convince him that the way to a happier next world is to be miserable in this one.

The newspaper man treats him condescendingly, apparently convinced that he has the I.Q. of a backward 11-year-old, and, in the name of "giving him what he wants," accept a formula which puts the coverage of a professional sports team on a par with historic, global decisions, stunning him daily with trivia.

The television man assails him hour upon hour with a smorgasbord alternating between treacle and savagery, larded with commercials that further demonstrate an absolute conempt for his sensitivity.

From all sides, in short, he's beleaguered by massive forces that seem bent on destroying his every hope of happiness, security, knowledge, good taste, maturity and individualism.

Because of these forces constantly and cold-bloodedly at work we've created the myth that The General Public is, in fact, bird-brained in judgment, shallow in tastes and bone-lazy in accepting the basic responsibilities of citizenship.

Yet two hard facts refute this.

The first is the obvious fact that the public is the victim of created appetite sold and popularized by such a complex of the machinery of mass communication techniques as to be almost unavoidable. Even so, public insistence eventually forces them to improve.

The second is the more positive fact that human progress under the democratic system somehow continues, painful and delayed as it may often appear. This is almost always the doing of the despised Average man who emerges from time to time out of his condition of enforced sloth and euphoria to make the decisions that carry us another inch forward.

How far forward we might go, and how quickly if manipulators treated him with genuine respect, is beyond imagination. But that, too. The General Public will, one day, achieve.

Haney Man Accused In Stabbing

A 17-year-old youth is in poor condition in Victoria General Hospital today after being stabbed in the stomach in a ruckus at the Wilson Motor Inn, 850 Blanshard, early this morning.

Frank Ross Oglivie of the Victoria area, a bus boy employed at the Inn, received the wound when he and two other employees were involved in a fight with three youths in the Inn's lower level carpark.

Glen Scott Kelly, 19, of Haney appeared in Victoria provincial court charged with wounding with intent. He was remanded in custody to Friday for bail application. No plea was entered.

Victoria police said the employees had just finished their shift at 2 a.m. and were preparing to go home when an argument developed in the lobby.

Words were exchanged as the six walked to the carpark where Ogilvie was stabbed once in the stomach with the blade of a small pocket knife.

FUNNY, I could have sworn I saw that curb being laid just the other day . . . Provincial civil servant Bonnie Johnson wasn't the only puzzled pedestrian on Government Street Wednesday, when a bulldozer ripped up about 50 feet of newly-installed curbing. Explanation? "The work just wasn't up to the standard we wanted so we told them (Capital City Construction Co.) to take it out and start again," said a City Hall spokesman.

Bastion 'Suffering' From Construction Din

C. M. Chambers, a restaurant proprietor and chairman of the newly-formed Bastion Square Merchants Association, said the buusinessmen have sent letters to the provincial government and Victoria city council, complaining about the bad timing and lack of co-operation in scheduling construction projects.

He said they don't dispute the faet that underground utilities, street beautification, renovations to old buildings and other works are necessary. But such tasks shouldn't be tackled during the peak tourist season.

"People walk up Government, hear the jack-hammers and compressors at the entrance to the square, come up against the big holes in the way, and walk on by," Chambers said.

It's no uncommon experience to see streets dug up, resurfaced and within a few weeks dug up again, he claimed. And the city administration itself must be held "ultimately responsible" for this lack of co-ordination.

Meanwhile, Robert McHaffie, immediate past-president of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said today he has heard that several Government Street merchants are experiencing a drastic drop in trade due to construction on the mall development.

"In some cases it's in the thousands of dollars per day," he said.

Ex-Officer Award Director

A Victoria retired naval officer has been appointed full-time provincial director of the Duke of Edinburgh's Award in Canada.

Peter Chance, 2019 Saltair Place, was formerly executive officer to the dean of law at Osgoode Law School in Toronto.

The award is a symbol of achievement in service, expeditions, hobbies, and physical fitness for young people aged 14 to 21.

No Saving Pensioner —Young

Donald Beaton Smith would have died in the June 10 fire at Esquimalt Lions' Lodge even if the municipality had three separate fire departments, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young saild today.

Young was commenting on a decision by the Victoria Labor Council to write the Esquimalt mayor urging separation of the municipality's joint police and fire department.

Labor council secretary Larry Ryan said Wednesday the move would be a practical step.

"If the municipality had a first class fire service, a life might have been saved," Ryan told delegates attending a regular council meeting.

"It's always the case that the people who don't live here and don't pay our taxes have all the answers," said Young.

"I'm absolutely convinced that if we'd had three separate fire departments (at that fire) the life would still have been lost," he said.

"As a resident who lives here and is concerned for the safety of my family, I'm completely satisfied with our police and fire service."

Esquimalt's police and fire departments are a combined force of 33 men.

Ryan said the request to Esquimalt was not to be construed a departure from the labor council's pro-amalgamation stand for fire and police services in the Victoria area.

Meanwhile, Esquimalt's fire committee chairman says the municipality will have to hire more firefighters to handle a new piece of firefighting equipment arriving this year.

"It's the best piece of equipment on the market now," said Ald. Art Mebs. "But there's no sense getting a $140,000 piece of apparatus and not having the manpower (to operate it)."

He referred to the large, versatile "snorkel" recently purchased by Esquimalt.

The unit will have an elevator platform mounted on a boom that will stretch 80 feet high for fighting fires in the municipality's taller buildings.

Mebs' suggestion that more men be hired has not yet been considered by council.

No hiring has been done in the combined police-fire force for more than a year, Chief Art Burton said Wednesday.

Boat Dwellers Escape Ban

Ten boat dwellers in Sidney's Van Isle Marina have so far escaped the municipal crackdown that hit live-aboards at Fishermen's Wharf this spring.

And Van Isle manager Alan Dickinson said today he considers his live-aboards an asset, not a liability.

About 15 people living on boats at Fishermen's Wharf, which is a federal facility administered by the municipality, were ordered to leave in early April.

The boat dwellers were told they were breaking federal regulations prohibiting dumping of garbage or wastes into the water, as well as a Sidney bylaw saying boats must be connected to a sewage disposal system.

Dickinson admitted that the boat dwellers at Van Isle don't have a sewage hookup and probably empty their wastes into the water, but he denied they caused any pollution problem.

One gallon of gasoline would do far more pollution damage than these boats, he said.

Dickinson's claim was supported by a spokesman for Northwest Biological Laboratories, which has a boathouse in the marina.

Dick Stratton said Northwest has holding tanks at the marina in which it grows sea urchins, starfish, sea lettuce and other sea life.

These have been thriving for months, he said, and they would have perished long ago if there were any pollution.

Dickinson said the live-aboards help to reduce vandalism and thefts at the marina becasue they are there overnight.

Sidney municipal clerk Geoff Logan said the municipal bylaw regulating boat dwellers' sewage disposal is difficult to enforce.

Three years ago, he said, an investigation into Van Isle boat dwellers was conducted after some citizens complained, but the live-aboards all denied they lived permanently on the boats.

In order to prove they did, the municipality would have to hire someone to watch the marina day and night for several days, he said.

Since that time there have been no other complaints, said Logan.

The municipality has benerally left it up to marina owners to watch out for problems, he said.

$5,000 DAMAGE IN CITY BLAZE

Fire broke out in a rooming house at 1255 Pandora this morning gutting one room and causing extensive smoke damage throughout the two-storey building.

The fire was reported by a passerby who saw smoke billowing out of a ground-floor window shortly after 11 a.m.

There was no one in the building at the time and Victoria firemen had the fire out within half an hour.

Mobile History Readied

Now perched in the Vic West E and N Roundhouse, the turn-of-the-century steel coaches are almost ready for their coats of traditional tuscan red paint.

They will be shipped to Vancouver by the Provincial Museum next week to join eight rail cars already refurbished there.

The assembled train — 600 feet long — will travel B.C. with human and natural history artifacts from the museum. It will be the province's first mobile museum of its size, museum modern history curator Dan Gallacher said.

Official opening of the museum train will be July 1 at Burnaby's Central Park, and its first Vancouver Island appearance will be in Nanaimo in the first week of August.

Main engine on the train will be the old CPR 3716 built in 1912.

B.C. Hospital Technicians Taking Vote

Strike votes by 2,500 members of the Health Sciences Association at hospitals in Victoria and across B.C. will start later today, the first such votes in the union's five-year history.

Jack Campbell, executive director of the HSA which represents laboratory and x-ray technicians, hospital pharmacists, physiotherapists, dietitians and medical records librarians, said today the results of the vote in 81 B.C. hospitals should be compiled by late next week.

There are 140 HSA members in the Royal Jubilee Hospital and 83 HSA members in Victoria General Hospital.

The union removed a no-strike clause in its constitution at a convention in May because the union has been "pushed around so much" in negotiations with the B.C. Health Association, formerly the B.C. Hospitals' Association, Campbell said.

Negotiations for a new contract started in early December and broke off this week after an offer from the B.C. Health Association which would have given some HSA members $39-a-month pay cuts, Campbell said.

Provincial mediator, Ed Sims has withdrawn from the negotiations and is now preparing his report for Labor Minister Bill King. No strike action is possible until the report has been handed in, possibly next week.

Campbell has been instructed by the HSA executive to arrange meetings with other hospital unions in the event that a strike is called.

He said a decision on whether to ask the other unions to honor picket lines set up will be made only after discussions with the other unions — the Hospital Employees' Association, the Registered Nurses' Association of B.C. and the International Union of Operating Engineers.

In the event of a strike, the HSA will maintain emergency services, Campbell said.

He said the union is putting together an HSA emergency committee at each hospital and the committee will act as a contact between the hospital and the union. In the event of an emergency during a strike, the committee would make sure that necessary HSA services would be provided.

Most of the HSA members are either radiology or laboratory technicians and the union is seeking parity for those members with the registered nurses.

Campbell said technicians require one year more training than registered nurses but are paid about $200 a month less than the nurses.

B.C. Health Association spokesman Joseph Roberts said the $39 a month pay cuts arose from the reclassification of some employees.

"Many of the employees would jump a classification grade (upwards)," Roberts said.

He said the hospitals' proposals are "just as realistic as (the union) proposals which would have seen technicians paid considerably more than registered nurses."

NUCLEAR TEST SHAKES VEGAS

MERCURY, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear device with a force at least 10 times greater than the atomic blast that levelled Hiroshima in the Second World War was detonated below the Nevada desert shortly after dawn today, creating a tremor felt in Las Vegas, 95 miles away.

There were no immedate reports of any damage from the tremor.

Forest Firms Pinched, Seek Union Restraint

Senior executives of B.C.'s forest companies today warned that the industry which represents about 50 per cent of the provinical economy, is in danger of becoming unprofitable and withering away.

The executives, members of Forest Industrial Relations and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, bargaining agents for the forest companies, said rising costs, particularly labor costs, are making the industry non-competitive in the world markets.

As the executives were making what they called a "sobering economic message to the people of B.C." a spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America, now in the midst of contract negotiations with FIR, said a strike vote by the 32,000 coastal woodworkers should be completed by the end of next week.

The next meeting between the union, which has been without a collective agreement since midnight Saturday, and the forest companies is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

"Traditionally the strike vote was taken prior to the expiry of the contract, but this year the bargaining committee decided to wait a little longer," the spokesman said.

Results of the strike vote will be released June 27.

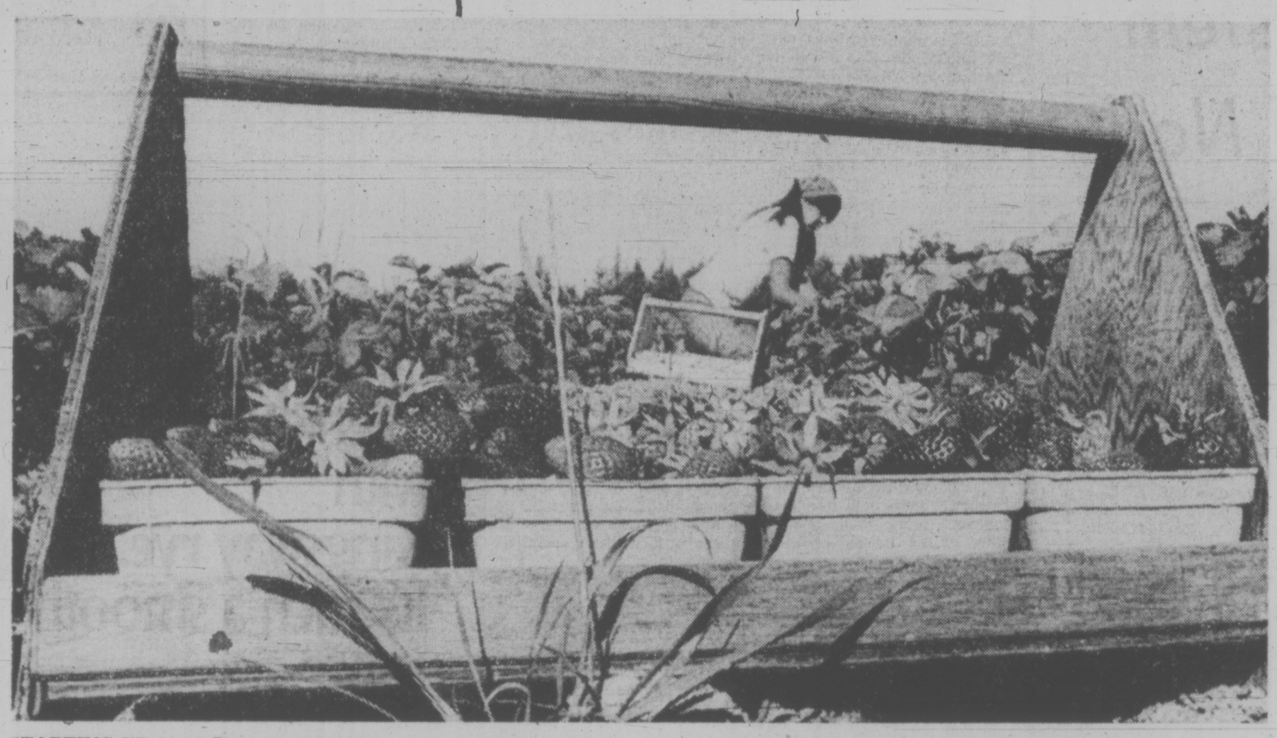
The union is asking for an across the board increase of $1 an hour plus a 24 cents an hour cost of living adjustment, improved health and welfare benefits and a dental plan in the one year contract.

FIR chairman Peter Bentley, president of Canadian Forest Products, said today the IWA demands amount to more than a $4 an hour increase, "not $1 as the IWA has publicized."

"We have reached the point in the industry's struggle for survival that having been caught between the demands of all levels of government and labor, we have been squeezed to the point where we must reverse the trend if in the mutual interest of all concerned, there is to be a viable future," Bentley said.

George Flater, vice-president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, involved in negotiations with the Canadian Paperworkers Union and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, said if B.C. producers have to absorb higher costs the profit margin will make it unattractive for companies to expand.

"If we are not competitive in price and manufacturing costs, we won't be able to provide new jobs and work opportunities and we could eventually have less jobs," Flater said.



STARTING UP for the home table is this year's strawberry season on the Saanich Peninsula. Season is expected to last three weeks and will be followed by raspberry and loganberry crops. The Canada Farm Labor Office of Canada Manpower has 250 persons registered looking for berry picking work and is expecting growers to call soon for workers. (John McKay photo)

EPP STILL PAID

Deputy attorney general for corrections E. W. Epp was ordered to take a leave of absence because "the government lost confidence in his ability to manage the (corrections) branch," a government spokesman said today.

Deputy Attorney General Dave Vickers said the decision to relieve Epp of his duties was based entirely on a question of management, especially in the area of budget and staff deployment.

Those reasons should have been "very clear" to Epp, said Vickers.

The corrections director, who was ordered to take the three month leave of absence Monday by Attorney-general Alex Macdonald said Wednesday he was not given any reason for the order and "was completely in the dark."

Epp is being paid during the leave of absence and according to the order will return to work for the government in some other capacity at the end of three months.

Vickers said any further comment on Epp's departure would have to come from Macdonald, who is in England this week.

Arabs 'Building Arsenal'

Times News Services

Israeli Defence Minister Shimon Peres said today that despite a trend for peace in the Middle East Arab nations are building up a war arsenal more powerful than that of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

And in Minneapolis Wednesday, President Ford warned of a "drift" toward war in the region.

Ford said any new fighting in the Middle East would be more dangerous than past conflicts and would include a paralyzing oil embargo.

The president's emphasis on the "drift" in the Mideast came as somewhat of a surprise after his discussions with Egyptian presidnet Anwar Sadat June 1-2 in Salzburg, and his discussions last week in Washington with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

"It is a potentially very volatile situation that could erupt into a real tough conflit any time, and the longer we drift with no prospect of action, the more potential the igniting becomes," Ford said.

"We are working with the whole Arab complex because another war out there would be worse than the Yom Kippur war of 1973. It would be

Cost-of-Living Boost Highest in Vancouver

OTTAWA (CP) — Cost-of-living increases in May hit residents of Vancouver and Saint John, N.B., the hardest, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Smallest increase in major cities across the country were recorded in Halifax and St. John's, Nfld.

Separate figures are not calculated for Victoria but factors here are considered to be the same as for Vancouver with many prices being somewhat higher.

The price indexes do not measure where goods and services are cheapest, only how fast prices rise or decline on average within the cities.

The government agency reported last week that the general consumer price index across the country rose eight-tenths of one per cent in May.

In Halifax and St. John's the May increase was one half of one per cent.

In Vancouver and Saint John it was 1.1 per cent.

Among the 14 cities, Halifax and Ottawa had the best price performance over May, 1974, with increases of 8.9 per cent.

The largest 12-month increase was in Winnipeg, where the index rose 11.2 per cent.

Food prices rose in all centres in May, although the price of most meats was down in St. John's. Beef and poultry prices dropped in Halifax and the cost of eggs, dairy products and bakery and cereal products declined in Edmonton.

The smallest food price increase for May was in Edmonton, where the food index rose three-tenths of one per cent. Regina had the smallest food price increase for the 12-month period with a 7.6-per-cent rise.

Saint John recorded the highest food price increases for both May and the 12 months. Food costs there jumped 1.8 per cent in May and were up 13.5 per cent for the 12-month period.

The rise in shelter costs in May was the smallest in St. John's, up three-tenths of one per cent.

The largest increase was in Vancouver, where shelter costs were up 1.1 per cent.

Halifax was best in shelter costs over the 12 months, with an increase of 5.8 per cent. The largest 12-month increase was a 12.2-per-cent rise in Winnipeg.

Clothing prices dropped in three cities in May — declining two-tenths of one per cent in Winnipeg and one-tenth of one per cent in both Toronto and Montreal.

The largest increases in clothing prices occurred in Ottawa, Saint John and Thunder Bay, Ont., where prices rose four-tenths of one per cent in May.

At the same time, Thunder Bay had the smallest increase in clothing prices over 12 months, with a rise of 3.9 per cent. The largest increase in clothing prices over the 12-month period was in St. John's, up 8.3 per cent.

Leftists Pelt Catholics

LISBON (CP) — Troops today evacuated about 600 Catholics, most of them women, trapped all night in the palace of the Archbishop of Lisbon by angry left-wing extremists.

The Catholics, some of them injured in a clash with the leftists outside the palace Wednesday night were driven off in open army trucks.

The Catholics had tried to stage a counter-demonstration against a left-wing rally in support of workers who had occupied a Catholic radio station. The occupation has threatened a church-state split.

The Catholics took refusge in the palace, headquarters of the Portuguese Catholic Church. The leftists, at times numbering over 5,000, threw stones, iron bars and sticks, and shouted "Death to Fascism."

Soldiers guarding the palace said after today's evacuatin that only a handful of Catholics were injured, none of them seriously.

As they were driven off in open army trucks, the surging crowd of leftists pelted them with rubbish and shouted insults.

There were nuns and a number of children among the evacuees.

Weekly Paycheque Averages $197.07

OTTAWA (CP) — The average industrial wage rose one per cent during April to $197.07 a week, 14.6 per cent higher than a year ago, Statistics Canada said Wednesday in a preliminary report.

The consumer price index rose by one-half of a percentage point in April, 11.1 per cent above a year earlier.

The industrial wage average covers about 4.5 million workers but does not include those in agriculture, government service, fishing and the military.

Statistics Canada says there were weekly gains in earnings in all the major regions and for all industry divisions except forestry.

New BCPC Plan Cuts Bunker Fuel

VANCOUVER (CP) George Lechner, general manager of the Crown-owned British Columbia Petroleum Corporation, said Wednesday the corporation has modified its proposed $350 million refinery to reduce by half the amount of bunker fuel produced.

As originally outlined, the refinery would have produced 40 per cent of its output in the form of bunker fuel. The petroleum industry average is between 12 and 15 per cent bunker fuel.

Cliff Goddard, B.C. corporate manager with Imperial Oil Ltd., had said Tuesday the heavy emphasis on bunker fuel could only lead to hefty losses by the government refinery.

He said bunker oil, used mainly in B.C. in pulp and cement plants and in ships, is a glut on the market now and can be bought at prices lower than that of Alberta crude oil landed in the Vancouver area for refining.

Lechner said Goddard's criticism was based on old information.

British Columbia Petroleum decided two weeks ago to change the design of its plant to reduce the volume of bunker fuel by half, Lechner said.

He also said the corporation is flexible and can react to any changes in its market forecasts.

Lechner also rejected figures used by Goddard in predicting an annual $50 million loss by B.C. Petroleum.

Goddard also said a BCPC refinery would either overwhelm the B.C. market or it would operate at a fraction of its rated capacity, causing losses because of idle capital investment.

Wall St. High Priests Weigh Barrett

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

It was to one of the most hallowed of these concrete halls that Premier David Barrett and his small entourage went to witness, if not to worship, on their way to shabbier, older, yet not necessarily wiser, institutions in London.

"We have to be careful about the word socialism," said one of the priests of Wall St. "Some people in this country tend to equate it with communism. The important thing is that British Columbia has a strong, resource-based economy."

It also has a budgetary surplus, which makes it unusual on this continent. And money is a much more significant world than socialism.

But Barrett has to be on best behavior, neat in regulation blue suit, to hobnob with the temple treasurers.

He is taken in hand, literally, by Salomon Brothers, which occupies three floors of One New York Plaza, opposite the Staten Island ferry, and greets visitors with liveried flunkeys in a sumptuous forty-second floor reception suite, littered with a few thousand dollars worth of antique furnishings.

Salomon Brothers is B.C.'s fiscal agent, and its executives groom Barrett for private sessions with the men who have the gold that streets are paved with.

They also see that the premier is neither at loose ends nor underfed during his two-day visit, providing two luncheons, a dinner and tickets to a baseball game.

Their interest is not political, but purely business. They get a piece of the action when B.C. raises money.

This has just happened, to everbody's satisfaction Barrett, Wall St., and Salomon Bros. A $125 million B.C. Hydro bond issue was postponed in March, when the going interst rate was between 10 and 11 per cent. Last year Hydro had been stung for 10 and a quarter per cent on a $100 millon issue. But the postponed issue went out at the beginning of this month at nine and five-eighths.

This was such a relief that B.C. decided to grab an extra $25 million while the going was good, and bumped up the bond issue accordingly.

"As it turns out, if they'd waited until next month the

Guerrillas Take Ad to Demand Ransom

WASHINGTON (WP) — An Argentine guerrilla group announced, in an advertisement published today in the Washington Post, that it would release two wealthy Argentine executives kidnapped nine months ago if their company paid a large ransom and met other demands.

The paid ad appeared to be ambiguously worded and its authenticity could not be verified ednesday. It seemed to indicate, however, that most of the demands had already been met and that the executives' release might be expected today.

On Sept. 19 — nine months ago today — terrorists in Buenos Aires kidnapped Jorge Born Jr. and Juan Born, brothers and executives of Bungey Born Co., one of the world's largest commodities trading enterprises.

A company manager and a chauffeur were killed in the rush-hour ambush.

The kidnappers were quickly identified as the Montoneros, an outlawed urban guerrilla group that claims loyalty to the late Argentine president, Juan Peron.

The ad in the Post was signed by the Montoneros.

Since the kidnapping, negotiations have been reported under way in several countries, including Spain, Switzerland and the Soviet Union.

Police sources in Argentina have reported ransom demands as high as $50 million.

The advertisement referred only to payment of "a very large sum" as one condition of the two executives' release.

In addition, it mentioned delivery of "merchandise" worth $1 million to townships, factories, schools and hospitals.

The text of the advertisement was brought to the Post Wednesday by a Washington lawyer, formerly a Justice Department attorney, who asked not to be identified.

The lawyer said the Post was the only U.S. newspaper asked to run the ad. It is expected also to appear in some newspapers in other countries, he said, but he declined to name them.

The lawyer said the text of the ad had been picked up Wednesday morning at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York by a client, whom he declined to identify. The lawyer said he did not know where the flight originated.

The lawyer described the ad's publication as essential to the executives' release, but he said he did not know whether it was the last step or how soon after its publication they might be freed.

"I never pinpointed when, after this, they will be released," he said.

In today's ad, the Montoneros said they had extensively questioned the Born brothers and imposed a series of "penalties" against the company as a result of a revolutionary "trial."

The two executives, it said, received one-year "prison" sentences that were "later commuted to nine months when the company fulfilled the remainder of the obligations."

Amtrack Pays Rape Victim

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Amtrak has been ordered to pay $30,000 to a teen-age girl raped on one of its trains.

Judge Robert Chapman, who ordered the payment designated $10,000 as punitive damages, saying the failure of one of the railroad's female employees to aid the victim was an "act of indifference and disregard for her duties."

Chapman said the woman employee had heard the victim's screams and should have obtained help. He also said she refused to aid the victim after the conductor and others rescued her and the victim's ordeal was prolonged because of the injection.

The 18-year-old victim had charged the railroad with failing to provide the highest degree of care to prevent her from attack and with violating its duty to her as a paying passenger.

Study Ordered On Car Pool

The city of Victoria might find it more economical to buy and operate its ownsmall fleet of automobiles for staff use, rather than paying its employees for the use of their private cars, Al. Sam Bawlf suggested today.

Bawlf, chairman of the finance committee, was apparently shocked to learn that it cost the city about $42,000 for mileage allowance payments to staff last year.

Told that some 40 to 45 employees were the recipients, he noted: "This represents on average about $1,000 apiece . . . I would think that $40,000 would service the cost of (purchasing) a lot of automobiles."

The discussion arose when the finance committee considered a recommendation for increased mileage allowances from city manager Jim Bramley.

Present rate is 14 cents per mile for union staff and 12 cents per mile for non-union staff, with a maximum allowance in effect for almost all personnel.

Bramley had suggested an increase to 18 cents per mile for all staff, for the first 500 miles driven each month. Above that total the rate would drop to 10 cents.

The committee tabled the matter and instructed staff to study the feasibility of purchasing vehicles for a city car pool.

Pension Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — A long-promised bill designed to assist elderly couples now living on one pension got final Commons approval Wednesday, only 15 days after it was introduced.

Despite some criticisms, the opposition parties co-operated with a government request for quick passage of the bill to give monthly payment to old age pensioners' spouses aged 60 to 64.

Starting Oct. 1, it would give extra income to approximately 85,000 spouses. Old age security payments now are available only to persons 65 and older.

Co-Ed Camping

Victoria's YM-YWC is experimenting in co-ed camping this year with one eight-day session for children eight-15 years.

Mixed camping sessions are already policy for adult and day camp programs and the Y's Outdoor Wilderness III but have never been run at Camp Thunderbird in Sooke.

Boys' programes will be directed by male staff members and girls' programs by female members, "Y" health and physical education director George Alliston said.

"They'll do some programs together and some separately," he said.

Waterfront lessons and games could be operated together for instance, while rougher games could be segregated.

Residential co-ed camping is being successfully run in other parts of Canada, he said.

"Co-ed camps may very well be the thing of the future at Camp Thunderbird," said Outdoor Education director John Durkin.

Segregated camps for both boys and girls will still be run during July and August, with the co-ed period from June 28 to July 5.

Programs in all sessions will include canoeing, cycling and hiking at the 1,000-acre camp in the Sooke Hills.

Hearing-Aid Protection

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed rule to allow hearing aid buyers to cancel purchases within 30 days could save consumers, particularly the elderly, more than $10 million annually, the U.S. Federal Trade Commission says.

Heraing aid manufacturers said that estimate was too high, however, and called the proposed regulation "heavy handed" and an "ominous precedent."

$250,000 in Relief

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government plans to contribute up to $250,000 this year for international relief projects, Premier Ed Schreyer told the legislature Tuesday.

Schreyer said the government will match donations to international organizations active in the province on a dollar-for-dollar basis to $250,000.

In turn, he said the federal government has agreed to provide up to $500,000 in matching funds for contributions from individuals and the provincial government.

Prison Art On Display

Watercolors, oil paintings and sculptures — the work of William Head Penitentiary prisoners — will be part of an art exhibit beginning Friday at the Greater Victoria Public Library's central branch.

Forty items will be shown on the second floor of the Yates and Blanshard St. building where a now-discontinued art collection was held.

William Head has carried on an arts and crafts program for more than a year under the direction of Jim Lindsay of Victoria.

ADVERTISERS DO YOU HAVE AN IMAGE?

• I DON'T KNOW. WHAT DO YOU MEAN — "DO I HAVE AN IMAGE?"
A good advertising image is a mental picture that reflects the kind of merchandise or service being offered for sale. For example: A quality furniture store should LOOK like a quality furniture store not a bargain hunter's paradise. And a budget priced store should always look like what it IS — so that it attracts the kind of people who are looking for the kind of merchandise it sells.

• YOU MEAN THE RITZ SHOULDN'T LOOK LIKE JOE'S DINER?

• HOW DO I GET AN IMAGE?
Well, first, you decide what kind of store you are — what sort of people you're appealing to, and then you design all your advertising to fit. You stick to the same style, so that people recognize your ad as YOURS as soon as they see it.

Well, like we said — you attract the right kind of customer to begin with. You're not going to sell a $900 dining suite to someone who's looking for a 79.95 kitchen set anyway, so why waste your advertising dollars? And people who want elegant dining facilities are going to be disappointed if all you serve is chili-burgers for 1.69

• ANYTHING ELSE?
Yes. By seeing your company advertise in a consistent manner, the public learns to gain confidence in YOUR firm. It establishes YOU in the mind of the people as a reliable, ongoing firm that knows its business — one that is going to be there to stand behind what it sells for years to come.

• BUT I DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT DESIGNING ADS. THEN WHAT?
That's what your two daily newspapers can do for you. We have a team of sales people who've been in the business a long time. They are trained to advise you on your budget. And, backing them up, is a team of artists and copy-writers who are trained to design an advertising campaign that will reflect your image and up your profits by increasing your business at a sure, steady rate.

• WHAT IS AN ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN ANYWAY?
That's a planned series of advertisements designed to do a specific job. It's the only way to advertise effectively. You establish your goals; our account representative brings them to the creative people, who work out the best way to reach your target. They use their imagination and their knowhow to think up something especially for you.

• HOW DO I KNOW I'LL LIKE IT?
You're given an artist's rough of your ad campaign so you can discuss it with others in your firm, and with your account rep. before you start the series. And re-vamp if necessary. Then, you get proofs of your ads after they've been typeset and the art is in place.

• HOW DO I KNOW I CAN AFFORD IT?
Because your account rep. knows your business; he knows what your advertising budget should be, based on your volume and what your cost-to-sell figures should be. So, when the creative department designs your ads, these figures are borne in mind so that the amount of space you buy fits in with what you can afford.

• BUT ISN'T IT EXPENSIVE TO HAVE THIS SPECIAL TREATMENT?
It costs no more than just buying space. Our creative team has books and books of headings, borders, drawings, sketches, and many different type styles to utilize. They are creative people who can put these things to good use for your benefit at no extra charge. They'll make up a series of ads that reflect the image you want to create, so that your ads are YOURS and YOURS ALONE.

B.C. Hospital Technicians Taking Vote

Strike votes by 2,500 members of the Health Sciences Association at hospitals in Victoria and across B.C. will start later today, the first such votes in the union's five-year history.

Jack Campbell, executive director of the HSA which represents laboratory and x-ray technicians, hospital pharmacists, physiotherapists, dietitians and medical records librarians, said today the results of the vote in 81 B.C. hospitals should be compiled by late next week.

There are 140 HSA members in the Royal Jubilee Hospital and 83 HSA members in Victoria General Hospital.

The union removed a no-strike clause in its constitution at a convention in May because the union has been "pushed around so much" in negotiations with the B.C. Health Association, formerly the B.C. Hospitals' Association, Campbell said.

Negotiations for a new contract started in early December and broke off this week after an offer from the B.C. Health Association which would have given some HSA members $39-a-month pay cuts, Campbell said.

Provincial mediator Ed Sims has withdrawn from the negotiations and is now preparing his report for Labor Minister Bill King. No strike action is possible until the report has been handed in, possibly next week.

Campbell has been instructed by the HSA executive to arrange meetings with other hospital unions in the event that a strike is called.

He said a decision on whether to ask the other unions to honor picket lines set up will be made only after discussions with the other unions — the Hospital Employees' Association, the Registered Nurses' Association of B.C. and the International Union of Operating Engineers.

In the event of a strike, the HSA will maintain emergency services, Campbell said.

He said the union is putting together an HSA emergency committee at each hospital and the committee will act as a contact between the hospital and the union. In the event of an emergency during a strike, the committee would make sure that necessary HSA services would be provided.

Most of the HSA members are either radiology or laboratory technicians and the union is seeking parity for those members with the registered nurses.

Campbell said technicians require one year more training than registered nurses but are paid about $200 a month less than the nurses.

B.C. Health Association spokesman Joseph Roberts said the $39 a month pay cuts arose from the reclassification of some employees.

"Many of the employees would jump a classification grade (upwards)," Roberts said.

He said the hospitals' proposals are "just as realistic as (the union) proposals which would have seen technicians paid considerably more than registered nurses."

NUCLEAR TEST SHAKES VEGAS

MERCURY, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear device with a force at least 10 times greater than the atomic blast that levelled Hiroshima in the Second World War was detonated below the Nevada desert shortly after dawn today, creating a tremor felt in Las Vegas, 95 miles away.

There were no immediate reports of any damage from the tremor.

Forest Firms Pinched, Seek Union Restraint

Senior executives of B.C.'s forest companies today warned that the industry which represents about 50 per cent of the provinical economy, is in danger of becoming unprofitable and withering away.

The executives, members of Forest Industrial Relations and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, bargaining agents for the forest companies, said rising costs, particularly labor costs, are making the industry non-competitive in the world markets.

As the executives were making what they called a "sobering economic message to the people of B.C." a spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America, now in the midst of contract negotiations with FIR, said a strike vote by the 32,000 coastal woodworkers should be completed by the end of next week.

The next meeting between the union, which has been without a collective agreement since midnight Saturday, and the forest companies is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

"Traditionally the strike vote was taken prior to the expiry of the contract, but this year the bargaining committee decided to wait a little longer," the spokesman said.

Results of the strike vote will be released June 27.

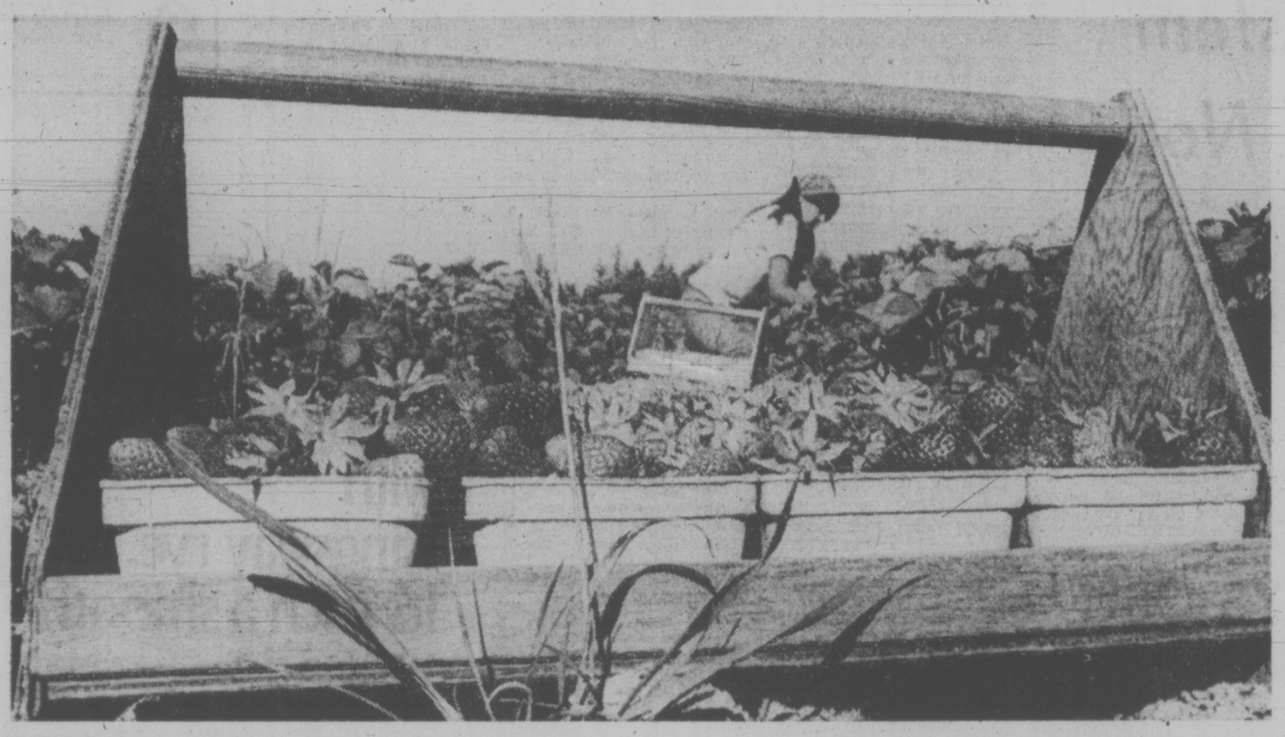
The union is asking for an across the board increase of $1 an hour plus a 24 cents an hour cost of living adjustment, improved health and welfare benefits and a dental plan in the one year contract.

FIR chairman Peter Bentley, president of Canadian Forest Products, said today the IWA demands amount to more than a $4 an hour increase, "not $1 as the IWA has publicized."

"We have reached the point in the industry's struggle for survival that having been caught between the demands of all levels of government and labor, we have been squeezed to the point where we must reverse the trend if in the mutual interest of all concerned, there is to be a viable future," Bentley said.

George Flater, vice-president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, involved in negotiations with the Canadian Paperworkers Union and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, said if B.C. producers have to absorb higher costs the profit margin will make it unattractive for companies to expand.

"If we are not competitive in price and manufacturing costs, we won't be able to provide new jobs and work opportunities and we could eventually have less jobs," Flater said.



STARTING UP for the home table is this year's strawberry season on the Saanich Peninsula. Season is expected to last three weeks and will be followed by raspberry and loganberry crops. The Canada Farm Labor Office of Canada Manpower has 250 persons registered looking for berry picking work and is expecting growers to call soon for workers. (John McKay photo)

EPP STILL PAID

Deputy attorney general for corrections E. W. Epp was ordered to take a leave of absence because "the government lost confidence in his ability to manage the (corrections) branch," a government spokesman said today.

Deputy Attorney General Dave Vickers said the decision to relieve Epp of his duties was based entirely on a question of management, especially in the area of budget and staff deployment.

Those reasons should have been "very clear" to Epp, said Vickers.

The corrections director, who was ordered to take the three month leave of absence Monday by Attorney-general Alex Macdonald said Wednesday he was not given any reason for the order and "was completely in the dark."

Epp is being paid during the leave of absence and according to the order will return to work for the government in some other capacity at the end of three months.

Vickers said any further comment on Epp's departure would have to come from Macdonald, who is in England this week.

Arabs 'Building Arsenal'

Times News Services

Israeli Defence Minister Shimon Peres said today that despite a trend for peace in the Middle East Arab nations are building up a war arsenal more powerful than that of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

And in Minneapolis Wednesday, President Ford warned of a "drift" toward war in the region.

Ford said any new fighting in the Middle East would be more dangerous than past conflicts and would include a paralyzing oil embargo.

The president's emphasis on the "drift" in the Mideast came as somewhat of a surprise after his discussions with Egyptian presidnet Anwar Sadat June 1-2 in Salzburg, and his discussions last week in Washington with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

"It is a potentially very volatile situation that could erupt into a real tough conflit any time, and the longer we drift with no prospect of action, the more potential the igniting becomes," Ford said.

"We are working with the whole Arab complex because another war out there would be worse than the Yom Kippur war of 1973. It would be

Cost-of-Living Boost Highest in Vancouver

OTTAWA (CP) — Cost-of-living increases in May hit residents of Vancouver and Saint John, N.B., the hardest, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Smallest increase in major cities across the country were recorded in Halifax and St. John's, Nfld.

Separate figures are not calculated for Victoria but factors here are considered to be the same as for Vancouver with many prices being somewhat higher.

The price indexes do not measure where goods and services are cheapest, only how fast prices rise or decline on average within the cities.

The government agency reported last week that the general consumer price index across the country rose eight-tenths of one per cent in May.

In Halifax and St. John's the May increase was one half of one per cent.

In Vancouver and Saint John it was 1.1 per cent.

Among the 14 cities, Halifax and Ottawa had the best price performance over May, 1974, with increases of 8.9 per cent.

The largest 12-month increase was in Winnipeg, where the index rose 11.2 per cent.

Food prices rose in all centres in May, although the price of most meats was down in St. John's. Beef and poultry prices dropped in Halifax and the cost of eggs, dairy products and bakery and cereal products declined in Edmonton.

The smallest food price increase for May was in Edmonton, where the food index rose three-tenths of one per cent. Regina had the smallest food price increase for the 12-month period with a 7.6-per-cent rise.

Saint John recorded the highest food price increases for both May and the 12 months. Food costs there jumped 1.8 per cent in May and were up 13.5 per cent for the 12-month period.

The rise in shelter costs in May was the smallest in St. John's, up three-tenths of one per cent.

The largest increase was in Vancouver, where shelter costs were up 1.1 per cent.

Halifax was best in shelter costs over the 12 months, with an increase of 5.8 per cent. The largest 12-month increase was a 12.2-per-cent rise in Winnipeg.

Clothing prices dropped in three cities in May — declining two-tenths of one per cent in Winnipeg and one-tenth of one per cent in both Toronto and Montreal.

The largest increases in clothing prices occurred in Ottawa, Saint John and Thunder Bay, Ont., where prices rose four-tenths of one per cent in May.

At the same time, Thunder Bay had the smallest increase in clothing prices over 12 months, with a rise of 3.9 per cent. The largest increase in clothing prices over the 12-month period was in St. John's, up 8.3 per cent.

Leftists Pelt Catholics

LISBON (CP) — Troops today evacuated about 600 Catholics, most of them women, trapped all night in the palace of the Archbishop of Lisbon by angry left-wing extremists.

The Catholics, some of them injured in a clash with the leftists outside the palace Wednesday night were driven off in open army trucks.

The Catholics had tried to stage a counter-demonstration against a left-wing rally in support of workers who had occupied a Catholic radio station. The occupation has threatened a church-state split.

The Catholics took refusge in the palace, headquarters of the Portuguese Catholic Church. The leftists, at times numbering over 5,000, threw stones, iron bars and sticks, and shouted "Death to Fascism."

Soldiers guarding the palace said after today's evacuatin that only a handful of Catholics were injured, none of them seriously.

As they were driven off in open army trucks, the surging crowd of leftists pelted them with rubbish and shouted insults.

There were nuns and a number of children among the evacuees.

Weekly Paycheque Averages $197.07

The industrial wage average covers about 4.5 million workers but does not include those in agriculture, government service, fishing and the military.

Statistics Canada says there were weekly gains in earnings in all the major regions and for all industry divisions except forestry.

New BCPC Plan Cuts Bunker Fuel

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Lechner, general manager of the Crown-owned British Columbia Petroleum Corporation, said Wednesday the corporation has modified its proposed $350 million refinery to reduce by half the amount of bunker fuel produced.

As originally outlined, the refinery would have produced 40 per cent of its output in the form of bunker fuel. The petroleum industry average is between 12 and 15 per cent bunker fuel.

Cliff Goddard, B.C. corporate manager with Imperial Oil Ltd., had said Tuesday the heavy emphasis on bunker fuel could only lead to hefty losses by the government refinery.

He said bunker oil, used mainly in B.C. in pulp and cement plants and in ships, is a glut on the market now and can be bought at prices lower than that of Alberta crude oil landed in the Vancouver area for refining.

Lechner said Goddard's criticism was based on old information.

British Columbia Petroleum decided two weeks ago to change the design of its plant to reduce the volume of bunker fuel by half, Lechner said.

He also said the corporation is flexible and can react to any changes in its market forecasts.

Lechner also rejected figures used by Goddard in predicting an annual $50 million loss by B.C. Petroleum.

Goddard also said a BCPC refinery would either overwhelm the B.C. market or it would operate at a fraction of its rated capacity, causing losses because of idle capital investment.

Wall St. High Priests Weigh Barrett

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

It was to one of the most hallowed of these concrete halls that Premier David Barrett and his small entourage went to witness, if not to worship, on their way to shabbier, older, yet not necessarily wiser, institutions in London.

"We have to be careful about the word socialism," said one of the priests of Wall St. "Some people in this country tend to equate it with communism. The important thing is that British Columbia has a strong, resource-based economy."

It also has a budgetary surplus, which makes it unusual on this continent. And money is a much more significant world than socialism.

But Barrett has to be on best behavior, neat in regulation blue suit, to hobnob with the temple treasurers.

He is taken in hand, literally, by Salomon Brothers, which occupies three floors of One New York Plaza, opposite the Staten Island ferry, and greets visitors with liveried flunkeys in a sumptuous forty-second floor reception suite, littered with a few thousand dollars worth of antique furnishings.

Salomon Brothers is B.C.'s fiscal agent, and its executives groom Barrett for private sessions with the men who have the gold that streets are paved with.

They also see that the premier is neither at loose ends nor underfed during his two-day visit, providing two luncheons, a dinner and tickets to a baseball game.

Their interest is not political, but purely business. They get a piece of the action when B.C. raises money.

This has just happened, to everbody's satisfaction — Barrett, Wall St., and Salomon Bros. A $125 million B.C. Hydro bond issue was postponed in March, when the going interst rate was between 10 and 11 per cent. Last year Hydro had been stung for 10 and a quarter per cent on a $100 millon issue. But the postponed issue went out at the beginning of this month at nine and five-eighths.

This was such a relief that B.C. decided to grab an extra $25 million while the going was good, and bumped up the bond issue accordingly.

"As it turns out, if they'd waited until next month the
